

Disclosure Project Intelligence Archive - Module One

Executive Summary

Adapted from an oral presentation by Dr. Greer - March 2024

This module is taken from a live event in March of 2024, and provides a detailed account of Dr. Steven Greer's involvement in the Disclosure Project and its origins, focusing on his efforts to engage peacefully with extraterrestrial intelligence and the challenges he faced from U.S. government entities.

Dr. Steven Greer started the Center for the Study of Extraterrestrial Intelligence (CSETI) in 1990 to establish a group of people prepared to peacefully contact non-human intelligence. The first significant and successful event under this initiative occurred in 1992, when a group, including Dr. Greer, conducted a Close Encounter of the Fifth Kind on a beach in Florida. This event attracted the attention of the intelligence community, which subsequently threatened Dr. Greer to cease his activities.

Following this incident, Dr. Greer faced numerous attempts to stop his initiative. His refusal led to continued encounters with high-ranking military and intelligence officials, who alternated between threatening and attempting to bribe him to join their covert activities.

Throughout the early 1990s, Dr. Greer attempted to educate and collaborate with members of the U.S. government, including President Bill Clinton and CIA Director R. James Woolsey, both of whom were repeatedly denied access to classified information about extraterrestrials. Dr. Greer's meetings aimed to advocate for the declassification of extraterrestrial-related projects and to foster a more transparent discussion about extraterrestrial affairs within the U.S. government.

Despite substantial resistance, Dr. Greer continued his efforts, leading to the formation of the Disclosure Project, which aimed to reveal the government's covert engagements with extraterrestrial technology and life forms. This project gathered momentum through several confidential meetings and discussions with insiders, eventually gaining significant public attention.

Several paragraphs detail Dr. Greer's ongoing struggle against what he perceives as a "decapitated" U.S. chain of command, where even high-level officials are kept in the dark about extraterrestrial matters. His narrative highlights a deep-seated layer of secrecy within the U.S. government, managed by a covert group that operates beyond legal boundaries, impacting the constitutional framework of the country.

INDIVIDUALS ARE NOW AUTHORIZED TO DISCLOSE INFORMATION WITHOUT FACING LEGAL PENALTIES. The projects they may expose have been deemed illegal. Any supposedly classified information related to these illegal projects can be brought forward, as these classifications are considered invalid due to the unlawful nature of the projects themselves.

ANY POTENTIAL WHISTLEBLOWERS NOW HAVE PROTECTION. This protection removes any previous barriers to coming forward with information, whether it involves material evidence (bodies, metals, etc.), documents, or methods related to these undisclosed criminal enterprises which legally LACK ANY LEGITIMATE NATIONAL SECURITY CLAIMS.

THIS IS A CALL TO ACTION, aimed at those who have been hesitant, by providing them the security assurances needed to disclose information that could be crucial in addressing and correcting clandestine and unauthorized activities.

The Disclosure Project Intelligence Archive exists and is available not only to members of Congress and the National Security Council but also to the other eight billion people on the planet.

The Center for the Study of Extraterrestrial Intelligence (CSETI) was the original parent organization of the Disclosure Project. Started in 1990 by Dr. Steven Greer and associates, CSETI was about creating a core of humans willing and able to make diplomatic and peaceful contact with non-human intelligence (N.H.I.) or extraterrestrial intelligence.

The initial Close Encounter of the Fifth Kind (CE5) contact was successfully conducted in March 1992 on a beach near Pensacola, Florida. About 60 people, including Dr. Greer and two U.S. Air Force pilots, participated in the CE5 contact protocols. They witnessed the materialization and arrival of four extraterrestrial vehicles, which were both photographed and filmed.

The situation became public when a photograph of one of the extraterrestrial crafts appeared on the front page of a Pensacola newspaper. This drew the immediate attention of the Intelligence Community, which then contacted Dr. Greer and threatened him regarding his activities. Dr. Greer's response was firm and immediate, stating, "I don't recognize your authority on the matter. We're all citizens of the universe and we're doing this as peaceful diplomats."

It is this sentiment that lies at the heart of CSETI and the Disclosure Project.

Following this rebuff, in April of 1992, Dr. Greer was summoned to a conference in Atlanta, Georgia by the then head of Special Forces and Army Intelligence, General Albert Stubblebine. Gen Stubblebine was an NSA/CIA operative and had convinced Dr. Greer that he was just attending a meeting. As it turned out, Dr. Greer was seated at the head conference table with the General.

Afterward, Dr. Greer was taken to a hotel room where he was told, in no uncertain terms, to stop initiating the CE5 protocols. It was not a pleasant meeting and led Dr. Greer to conclude that there was a covert group managing this intimidation operation who really did not care about the rule of law. In other words, they didn't care if they suspended people's basic human rights, nor did they care if they killed people, as this was the exact sentiment that was relayed to Dr. Greer.

In May of 1992, Apollo Astronaut Dr. Brian O'Leary and co-founder of The Peace Corps Dr. Maury Albertson, hosted Dr. Greer at Camp St, Malo, a Catholic retreat center in Estes Park in the Rockies, near Fort Collins, Colorado. General Stubblebine and others also attended this event where he, in the words of Dr. Greer, decided to become the "good cop." It was here that Gen. Stubblebine personally offered Dr. Greer two billion dollars if he would shut down the CE5 effort and join his team.

Following the end of the Cold War, they had secured a huge fund of confiscated assets and monies out of Eastern Europe which Gen. Stubblebine offered to give Dr. Greer complete control over and access to. Dr. Greer refused. Gen. Stubblebine then approached Dr. Greer's wife and made the same offer, asking that she try her best to convince him to join their team. At that point, Dr. Greer made it clear that the discussion was over.

With this sobering introduction to the intelligence community, Dr. Greer concluded that there was not going to be a clear path ahead to continue with CE5 contact. There would be continued interference by people who did not want contact to happen peacefully.

And so began The Disclosure Project, born of this first successful CE5 contact event. Quietly, between 1992-2001, Dr. Greer and his team set up Project Starlight, a code-name chosen by the man who set up Dr. Greer's first meeting with the CIA Director under President Bill Clinton, R. James Woolsey.

[See document #115247]

In the DPIA archive are documents related to a January 1993 attempt by friends of President Clinton to persuade him to bear down on this matter and issue an executive order declassifying the project and these programs, and to release the information and deal with it in a legal and Constitutional way.

Very early in President Clinton's term, Dr. Greer was approached by the President of the Arlington Institute, John L. Petersen. He wrote in a FedEx that both President Clinton and CIA Director Woolsey had had made inquiries and been denied access or information.

During that 1993 period, Project Starlight was started to get people in the White House and Congress educated on this subject so they could take an affirmative action to penetrate those programs, declassify them, and inform the public.

During this time, Dr. Greer was approached by a man from Naval Intelligence. Initially, Dr. Greer was hesitant, however the man was very supportive, and he too wanted the information out. He worked with very senior officials in the Pentagon and CIA and said that his outreach had been denied. He offered his help.

In July of 1993, Dr. Greer attended a meeting at the Monroe Institute, in Virginia. In attendance were covert State Department CIA operative CB Scott Jones, a military advisor who had also offered to help, and several other interested parties. The purpose of this outreach was to coordinate with the Executive Branch, the Pentagon and military, to "deconflict" Dr. Greer's CE5 contact operations with military operations. There was a mutual desire to avoid interference on either side and to educate those who should know about this subject but had been deliberately denied access.

In 1992-1993, Dr. Greer met with senior officials and other individuals associated with the top echelons of the Pentagon and the White House. He also met with Kevin Foley and his brother, close personal friends of President Clinton, both of whom had stayed at the White House.

While all this was being backchanneled, it came to light that when President Clinton tried to move into this issue and make inquiries, he had been threatened by people representing the covert government programs headed by former president and CIA Director George HW Bush. He came forward and told Clinton to back off and that this was "none of your business."

The DPIA includes a recent sworn statement from a man who wished to remain anonymous, a well-known entertainment agent who represents many high-profile celebrities. He was in a limousine with Clinton when the former president shared this story.

It was obvious at this point that we were in a grave Constitutional crisis. The American Chain of Command, including the president and Members of Congress had been effectively decapitated. It wasn't until the summer of 1993 that Dr. Greer initiated a serious effort to engage with Congress.

In September 1993, Dr. Greer received an invitation from Lawrence Rockefeller to join him at the Rockefeller Ranch in the Tetons. The meeting was attended by Bob Bigelow of Bigelow Aerospace, and Dr. John Mack and others. Unbeknownst to the others, Lawrence Rockefeller had convened this gathering with a sense of urgency, eager to have the new president address the issue. Understanding the significance, Dr. Greer accepted the invitation.

[See document #127538]

What the others didn't realize was that Dr. Greer and his team had already been working behind the scenes, reaching out to the President, the Pentagon, and CIA. This was information that Lawrence Rockefeller was unaware of at the time. There was a noticeable surprise when Dr. Greer mentioned that after leaving the ranch, he planned to coordinate the CE5 contact team's efforts with the Pentagon's operations.

At that time, Admiral Cramer, head of the Intelligence Joint Staff, ordered the head of the Air Force and Air Force Intelligence to meet with Dr. Greer, his military advisor, and CB Scott Jones. Dr. Greer had assumed that Jones was a former State Department official, unaware that he was actually an embedded intelligence operative.

The meeting location was Wright Patterson Air Force Base, which at that time was the Foreign Aerospace Science Technology Center (FASTC). Originally, this facility had been the Foreign Technology Division (FTD) of the Air Force, where the 1947 Roswell and other early crashed ET vehicles and bodies were sent. This was now 1993.

Dr. Greer had a meeting with Bruce Ashcroft and Colonel Kanola, who were both under the impression that Dr. Greer aimed to gather insights and probe their operations. This suspicion led them initially to refuse a meeting request from the head of Air Force Intelligence, who subsequently relayed their refusal to Admiral Cramer, the head of the Intelligence Joint Chiefs of Staff. Admiral Cramer overruled their decision, asserting, "You will take this meeting!" Given his higher position in the chain of command, they had no choice but to comply.

At the meeting, Dr. Greer informed them that he was not interested in hearing about the operations at the base since he was already well-informed. By September 1993, he had insiders who had worked in that command and were involved in the early crash retrievals. This network had been established rapidly between 1992 and 1993.

The intelligence officers just stared at Dr. Greer while one officer furiously recorded everything. Dr. Greer explained that his presence was to harmonize his efforts of making peaceful contact with their military operations, and to request that they cease their disruptions. Their interference had involved dispatching jet fighters and Special Forces to disrupt CE5 events. This context set the stage for what was a challenging meeting; the officers were visibly irritated, having been compelled to attend despite their initial reluctance.

The night before Dr. Greer departed from the Rockefeller Ranch, he and Lawrence Rockefeller, who was then in his 80s and considered the "Philosopher King" of the family, stepped out onto the deck. It was late, and everyone else had retired for the evening. The two engaged in a deep conversation. Lawrence's brother was David Rockefeller of Chase Manhattan Bank, now known as J.P. Morgan Chase, and his nephew was Senator Jay Rockefeller, the chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee. Both had been "read-in" on the covert programs and were infuriated that Lawrence was hosting this meeting with Dr. Greer.

During their conversation, Lawrence inquired about the progress of Dr. Greer's disclosure efforts. Dr. Greer explained that he was merely an emergency doctor without official standing, wealth, or political influence. He then suggested that Lawrence, given his age, wealth, and status as a Rockefeller, was better suited for the task. Lawrence responded with a laugh, explaining that he couldn't proceed because his brother and nephew were "already jumping up and down on my nuts because I'm even having this meeting with you!"

When Dr. Greer asked Lawrence how best to proceed, Lawrence suggested that they could work behind the scenes. Initially, Dr. Greer thought Lawrence was offering to lead, but Lawrence clarified that Dr. Greer himself must take the lead.

Dr. Greer expressed his reservations, citing his commitments as a full-time emergency doctor with a 100-hour weekly schedule and family responsibilities. Despite these concerns, Lawrence insisted that it had to be Dr. Greer who led the initiative.

After a brief exchange about their respective roles, Dr. Greer agreed to take on the challenge, emphasizing the need for substantial support. Following this agreement, Lawrence began to financially support Dr. Greer's early disclosure efforts and gatherings, as detailed in the accompanying documents.

[\[See document #115190\]](#)

A few months after the meetings at Rockefeller Ranch and Wright-Patterson Air Force Base, Dr. Greer prepared for a briefing with CIA Director R. James Woolsey. Originally scheduled for November, the briefing was postponed to December.

The archive contains a document, specifically mentioned in a FedEx sent to Dr. Greer, stating that neither the CIA director nor the president had been granted access to information. Moreover, it emphasized that Dr. Greer would be the first to brief the administration on the matter.

When Dr. Greer read the document, he dismissed it as utter nonsense. He found it hard to believe that an emergency doctor from North Carolina, who was merely a civilian, could have more information than the president and the CIA director. Yet, that was indeed the case. Dr. Greer initially suspected it was a ploy by the CIA director, a cunning spymaster, to extract information from him, knowing that he was pushing the issue up the chain of command in the Pentagon and other areas.

They apparently had no information. Dr. Greer's initial assumption was that the document was merely a tactic to make him disclose everything he knew. He brought a large briefcase filled with documents, evidence, and information to the meeting.

As he began showing photos and other materials, Director Woolsey stopped him, stating that he did not need to see them because he already knew they were real. It turned out that Woolsey and his wife had experienced a sighting in the 1960s that was close enough to confirm it was not a normally propelled aircraft.

Dr. Greer asked, "Well, what would you like to discuss?"

The meeting was discreetly arranged as a dinner party at the home of John Peterson. The cover story was a dinner for three couples: Dr. Greer and his wife, the CIA Director and his wife, Dr. Sue Woolsey, who was the Chief Operating Officer of the National Academy of Sciences, and John Peterson and his wife.

Dr. Greer anticipated that it would be a relatively short meeting, with Director Woolsey simply receiving a transfer of information as a way of gathering intelligence. However, the meeting deeply affected Director Woolsey. He confided in Dr. Greer, describing the situation as very eerie and expressing a desire to receive everything Dr. Greer had to offer. Dr. Greer agreed to share the information.

The discussion extended for almost three hours, and it was clear that this denial of access was a serious issue. They discussed a range of topics, but Woolsey was particularly interested in the upcoming topics for the cabinet intelligence briefing modules scheduled for the next week.

He was curious about who was keeping these secrets and why, as he had no prior knowledge of such clandestine activities. Despite his experience as an arms negotiator for President Reagan during the SALT I talks, he was unaware of why such secrecy was maintained; secrecy that led to illegal, unsanctioned operations that even denied access to the President, himself, and senior members of the National Security Council.

Dr. Greer, informed by his military advisor from Navy intelligence, knew of similar situations affecting counterparts at the Department of Defense. When he shared this with Director Woolsey, Woolsey was astounded.

Dr. Greer's initial critical insight, his first data point which everyone should understand thoroughly, comes from direct meetings held in 1992 and 1993, not from internet gossip or conspiracy theories. These discussions demonstrated that:

THE UNITED STATES CHAIN OF COMMAND HAD BEEN DECAPITATED.

The President, Congress, key senior officials in the Pentagon, and the politically appointed CIA Director had all been denied access to certain critical information.

However, the situation is more nuanced than it initially appears. For example, knowledge about this information has varied among CIA directors. George H.W. Bush was aware of these details, while other directors were not. A similar inconsistency exists within the Defense Intelligence Agency, which functions like a CIA for the Pentagon, where some directors have been informed and others have not. This selective distribution of knowledge also applies to certain heads of J2, the Intelligence Directorate of the Joint Staff, and extends to various senators and congressmen - some are in the loop, while others are not.

Another key insight from the early 1990s concerned the structured approach to information dissemination. Initially, an individual might receive a small amount of information under a Non-Disclosure Agreement (NDA) and a Top Secret Sensitive Compartmented Information (TS/SCI) clearance. Observers would then monitor the individual's reaction and, if deemed appropriate, conduct a psychological analysis to determine their suitability for further access, particularly their ability to keep secrets. The more sensitive the secret, the greater the likelihood that it might be disclosed.

Should there be any indication that an individual might disclose information, no further details would be shared with them, regardless of their career advancement. This policy applied to everyone, including high-ranking officials such as the Director of the CIA, the President of the United States, or the Chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee.

Another key takeaway, which is an important insight for members of Congress, the White House, National Security, and the general public, is as follows:

THE CRITERIA FOR ACCESS ARE BASED ON A PERSON'S WILLINGNESS TO COMPLY WITH AN ILLEGAL, UNSANCTIONED PROGRAM.

If an individual is not willing to participate, they are simply no longer informed. In the early stages of these operations, there were instances where individuals who were aware and unwilling to comply with the covert program faced severe consequences. They were terminated. A notable example being President John F. Kennedy.

That transition from the 1950s to early 1960s marked a decisive moment when authorities decided to prevent the executive branch, including the presidency and members of Congress, from accessing or controlling information on certain subjects. Typically, if these officials pressed for information, they were met with outright denials or misdirected with disinformation.

Later modules delve into a detailed discussion about how this secrecy is maintained and the techniques employed to manage information and maintain confidentiality. It's important for everyone to understand these methods and their operations, as this will help to recognize the patterns of secrecy. This phenomenon is not unique to any one country but is a global practice.

After a very amicable meeting with CIA Director Woolsey in December 1993, Dr. Greer promised to share all the information he could gather. In response, Woolsey committed to unearthing additional details. By early 1994, Woolsey had sent Dr. Greer a large box filled with CIA documents, which he had compiled; all these documents are now stored in the archive. It is a substantial collection, much of which had never been disclosed previously.

Woolsey managed to retrieve some information and shared intelligence with Dr. Greer before distancing himself. After serving a few years, Woolsey left his position as CIA Director.

Subsequently, he, along with Mr. Peterson and their wives, publicly denied the meeting ever occurred, branding Dr. Greer not just a liar but "a damn liar."

This was Dr. Greer's introduction to Washington.

Upon entering this secretive world, Dr. Greer learned that individuals are trained to lie. There were swift attempts to deny any meeting had occurred because it appeared that CIA Director Woolsey had been influenced, dissuaded, and significantly financially induced to disavow the subject and support the illegal covert programs that were in control.

President Clinton, however, continued to pursue the matter for a couple of years after the briefing and established what is known as Team Red to penetrate these secretive programs. For clarity, Team Black refers to the illegal projects, while Team Blue denotes the legal projects of the United States.

Team Red was specifically assembled to infiltrate Team Black. Tragically, most members of Team Red were killed - "erased" through "wet works" - a term that denotes assassinations, so-called because of the blood involved. Those who were not eliminated were co-opted through various inducements.

A month before Dr. Greer's meeting with the CIA director, he had a significant encounter in Phoenix, Arizona, with Jim Dilletoso, a digital picture analyst. Dilletoso was also known for his substantial contributions to large digital studio projects, including those for Bono of U2, and was a highly prominent figure in digital music.

Importantly, those involved in covert illegal programs don't openly identify themselves as being a Non-Official Cover (NOC) for organizations like the CIA, Pentagon, JSOC, or Lockheed Skunk Works.

Members of Congress and the public need to be aware of this reality, a realization that Dr. Greer came to in his early years of involvement.

Dr. Greer had been acquainted with Jim Dilletoso for a year or two when Dilletoso invited him to the Wrigley Mansion. This expansive estate in the desert foothills of Phoenix was originally built by the Wrigley chewing gum family and had later been acquired by Jordy Hormel of Hormel Foods. Dilletoso was using the mansion as an operation center when handling his assets.

Late that night, Dilletoso invited Dr. Greer to meet in a large conference room filled with people, all dressed in suits. Dilletoso revealed that they had intercepted all communications about Dr. Greer's upcoming meeting with the CIA director. He informed Dr. Greer that meeting with the president and the CIA director was unnecessary, as they were uninformed about the issues at hand and would remain so.

Dilletoso suggested that if Dr. Greer wanted to understand the subject, he should speak with his group instead. He explained that they managed all the work-for-other (WFO) contracting programs, supported the supercomputers for the global banking system, and were in charge of technology transfer programs involving certain orders of Jesuit priests.

Instead of offering $2 billion like the head of Army Intelligence had, Dilletoso proposed that Dr. Greer could take out as many platinum credit cards as he desired, and they would clear the balances each month, allowing him unlimited spending. Dilletoso assured him of their capability to manage this arrangement, stating it as an absolute fact.

Dr. Greer declined, explaining that accepting such an offer would mean they owned him. Dilletoso attempted to reassure him, patting him on the back and claiming they were there to help. However, Dr. Greer was wary, aware that such "help" could later be used against him as leverage, potentially leading to accusations of bank fraud or enormous debts accrued through interest. He firmly stated that he would not allow this to happen.

This was yet another attempt to coerce him into compliance. These vignettes are crucial for understanding the methods used to manipulate people into these secretive circles.

Individuals are often lured in through direct threats, threats to their families, or blackmail leveraging any compromising information they can find - or fabricate through deep fakes. It's worth noting that AI technology, while only recently becoming publicly known, has been used in covert operations for decades. They also use inducements like positions of power and monetary incentives to sway individuals.

This is how it operates, as Dr. Greer experienced firsthand during a brief but enlightening period from 1992 to 1994. By the end of this period, he understood the magnitude of the challenges he would face in addressing this issue.

Despite these challenges, Dr. Greer and his team decided to proceed. They concluded that a crucial strategy moving forward would be to assemble early witnesses and whistleblowers. This was before such actions became widely reported in the news during the years 1993-1995.

They initiated Project Starlight to discreetly gather individuals to present their information in front of the president and key members of Congress, aiming for a proper disclosure with actionable, specifically known intelligence.

In this effort, Dr. Greer began to spread the word and quietly build a network.

The first meeting documented in the archive is the Asilomar gatherings of June 1995, held at Asilomar, a retreat location near Esalen in Monterey, California. Dr. Greer organized this event, which attracted about a dozen early top-secret personnel.

Among the attendees was an original participant from the Roswell retrieval and Soviet cosmonaut Marina Popovich, whose husband, Pavel Popovich, akin to America's Neil Armstrong, had experienced a sighting and encounter.

The entire proceedings were recorded by an amateur volunteer, resulting in less-than-optimal video quality.

Delving deeper into the intrigue surrounding these operations, Kevin Foley, a prominent Democratic fundraiser and friend of President Clinton, had been influenced to disrupt this process. Foley managed to take all the footage recorded over the weekend from the volunteer and absconded with it. Foley had initially appeared to be a kind of New Age, UFO enthusiast with long hair and a van, but he was in fact an operative.

Fast-forward 26 years, Dr. Greer received an email from Marty Keller in Minneapolis-St. Paul. Keller had been involved in the early days, assisting with writing and publicity, and had kept in contact with Kevin Foley, also from Minnesota.

As Foley aged, he began to show signs of dementia. During a conversation with Keller, he revealed that he had all the tapes from the Asilomar meeting, which he had buried in his backyard in a time capsule. After surviving 26 years of freezing and thawing, the tapes were excavated by Foley and handed over to Keller, who then sent them to Dr. Greer. These tapes are now preserved in the archive.

[\[Search for Asilomar, Ca\]](#)

Once lost for 26 years, the Asilomar meeting marked the first gathering of whistleblowers willing to share their stories on camera, providing crucial information to the president and selected members of Congress Dr. Greer had access to. It was a historic event.

From that experience, Dr. Greer deduced another key lesson about trust. If someone can be corrupted through threats, blackmail, money, or the promise of power, they are likely to betray the cause. Dr. Greer, initially naive about how the world functioned, realized that he needed to exercise greater caution in his endeavors.

By 1995-96, Dr. Greer had learned from contacts in the White House that the president had been discouraged from pursuing further investigations and would not continue. Dr. Greer pondered the implications, considering that if they were dealing with a two-term president, they would be in this situation until January 2001, prompting him to think about the next steps.

Fast forwarding to 1997, Dr. Greer organized another significant event, gathering about 20 whistleblowers in Washington for a private briefing off Capitol Hill at the Westin Hotel in Georgetown. These individuals were flown in from various locations for this purpose. Tony Craddock, who has since passed away, recorded the proceedings with a simple homemade camera. These recordings, thought to have been lost, later resurfaced, and are now stored in the archives.

[\[See documents \(videos\) #127589, #127590, #127591\]](#)

The recordings offer a raw, unedited glimpse into the discussions, characterized by poor sound and video quality but are valuable as they document the proceedings and support Dr. Greer's assertions.

Following the gathering, where participants had a day to acquaint themselves with each other, the next evening was set to host members of Congress, including Representative Dan Burton. This sequence of events illustrates Dr. Greer's ongoing efforts to engage with and inform legislative members about his findings.

Burton, who was the Chairman of the House Oversight Committee in April 1997, was highly interested in the subject because one of his close friends from his office had experienced a very close sighting of a craft right outside her window.

Burton was convinced of the reality of these phenomena, but despite his position, he had no access to further information. As a result, like many others, he approached Dr. Greer, distressed and complaining that despite his inquiries, he was consistently lied to and kept in the dark.

Dr. Greer explained that his exclusion from sensitive information was because he was perceived as an honest individual who would likely share the truth with the public. Sharing the truth was seen as a risk by those in control because it could lead to the same consequences faced by Jack Kennedy.

These difficult conversations were necessary. Dr. Greer suggested that congress should organize an open hearing with subpoenas, where witnesses would testify under oath and present their documents and information, facing the federal penalty of perjury if they lied.

However, this did not materialize. At that time, the interest from members of Congress was more out of curiosity, similar to today, but with even less inclination to engage deeply due to the social stigma associated with the subject. It's not that they doubted the reality; rather, they were reluctant to face the political ridicule that came with addressing what was considered a topic for kooks, conspiracy theorists, and the like.

It was a political risk, and they knew from experience that anyone who delved into these matters was subject to harsh ridicule by the media.

The major media outlets are entirely influenced by corrupt interests from the intelligence community that are intent on maintaining secrecy. This statement holds true across all political spectrums, and understanding this is crucial to grasping how secrecy has been sustained for 70-80 years.

Dr. Greer diligently worked to engage members of Congress on this issue. Among those he met was Senator Dick Bryan from Nevada, home to notable locations like Area 51 and Nellis Air Force Base. Senator Bryan had never been briefed on these matters and was unaware of the reasons behind his exclusion.

Dr. Greer also met with several other influential figures; however, none were prepared to take over the initiative from Dr. Greer and fulfill their constitutional duties by investigating and gaining control over these covertly run programs.

The efforts continued until the day after the offsite congressional briefing at the Westin Hotel in April of 1997. Following this, Dr. Greer was escorted to the Pentagon to brief the then-new J2, Head of Intelligence Joint Chiefs of Staff, Admiral Tom Wilson. Documentation detailing how this briefing was arranged can be found in the archive.

The exposure of Admiral Wilson's involvement came to light particularly after the passing of Edgar Mitchell, when his archives were released. It included an interview conducted with Admiral Wilson by an intelligence operative, believed to be Dr. Rice, on behalf of the Bigelow National Institute of Discovery Sciences, led by Robert Bigelow before he founded Bigelow Aerospace.

Bigelow had become involved in a faction of covert programs dealing with UFOs, orchestrated by Colonel John Alexander.

Apollo Astronaut Edgar Mitchell was also present at this meeting primarily to gather information, as he was then beginning to explore these issues. Dr. Mitchell, renowned as the sixth man to walk on the moon, was actively making inquiries about these secretive operations.

Chronologically, it is important to note that not long after this meeting, Dr. Greer's close assistant, Shari Adamiak, was killed.

Prior to the meeting, Dr. Greer had arranged for a courier to deliver a cache of documents to Admiral Wilson, which had been obtained from Nellis Air Force Base and Area 51. Among these documents was a National Reconnaissance Office document listing the code names and numbers of operations associated with this topic, as well as a classified distribution list that has not yet been declassified, located here:

[\[See document #115099\]](#)

Following this, the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff began to make inquiries, as evidenced by notes taken by his debriefer, which were later leaked. The meeting with Admiral Wilson was a stand-up briefing at the Pentagon. During this briefing, Admiral Wilson disclosed that he had been denied access to further information as he began to probe deeper. The documents Dr. Greer provided included details on where to look, including project names and code words.

[\[See document #116965\]](#)

During the briefing, which was initially scheduled for 45 minutes but extended to about three hours due to the admiral canceling subsequent meetings, Admiral Wilson expressed significant interest and grasped the implications of the information quickly. However, he also revealed that he had been personally threatened with demotion, resulting in reduced pay and benefits, which led him to withdraw from further discussions on the subject.

At the end of the lengthy discussion, Dr. Greer asked Admiral Wilson if he would assist with their efforts. Wilson declined, citing his denied access and the threats he received. He made a crucial observation, noting that there were aircraft far more advanced than the B-2 stealth bomber, which were under the control of this unauthorized group, effectively putting them at a strategic advantage - a realization that led him to step back from further involvement.

That was April 1997. 27 years ago. Nothing has changed since.

Dr. Greer acknowledged the differences in their positions, pointing out that while Admiral Wilson was a high-ranking officer, he himself was an emergency doctor shuttling between his ER in North Carolina and Washington, D.C., conducting these activities in his spare time. Dr. Greer noted that unlike his staff, he was not paid for his efforts. He decided to continue working on the initiative despite the challenges.

The meeting concluded amicably, with Dr. Greer choosing not to pressure Admiral Wilson further, recognizing the risks involved for someone not prepared to jeopardize their safety.

Dr. Greer then planned to continue pursuing this strategy for a few more months before making the details public. He drafted a letter sent with return receipt requested to every relevant office in the U.S. government, including civilian agencies, the CIA, Pentagon, and FBI, requiring them to sign for it.

The letter, an Unless-Otherwise-Directed (UNOD) communication, is a military protocol Dr. Greer learned about from his military contracts. It stated his assessments and indicated that unless otherwise directed, they would proceed with their planned actions. This type of letter effectively puts the recipient on notice about the intended actions.

In the letter, Dr. Greer outlined that unless contradicted by the president, the Pentagon, or any relevant office within the Department of Justice or FBI, he and his team would begin public disclosures starting in January of 1998, that would bypass the U.S. government.

This initiative marked the birth of the modern Disclosure Project, transitioning from Project Starlight. This project led to the widespread use of the term "disclosure" in public dialogues about these issues, a term Dr. Greer originally coined for this public project.

Between 1998 and 2000, Dr. Greer continued to network and gather whistleblowers, eventually accumulating a group of about 100 whom he was able to interview and film. This culminated in the National Press Club event in April of 2001.

[\[See document #115434\]](#)

The event was viewed by over 800 million people. Dr. Greer, known for his commitment, had promised to hold this event, and followed through. At the time, the project operated without an office and was supported entirely by volunteers, a situation that largely remains true today with only two staff members.

The event served as a call to action for Congress and a plea for more whistleblowers to come forward. By 2023, the archive had expanded to include 750 potential witnesses and whistleblowers. For those who requested confidentiality, their names were redacted and replaced with a five-digit code.

The key takeaway from this period, from 1992 to 2001, is that despite exhaustive efforts to engage government authorities to act appropriately, they consistently failed to do so. As a result, Dr. Greer and his group, comprised of civilians, patriots, and concerned global citizens, decided to take matters into their own hands.

He provided briefings for subsequent U.S. presidents, including George W. Bush, Barack Obama, and Donald Trump. All these presidential briefings and comprehensive documents are stored in the archive.

The efforts to engage and network with members of Congress continued incrementally.

A significant development occurred in 2017 when the documentary Unacknowledged was released, marking another turning point in bringing attention to these issues.

This documentary reached approximately 780 million viewers globally. It was a crowd-funded exposé that included interviews with witnesses and detailed accounts of the issues at hand, lasting about an hour and 40 minutes and quickly going viral.

However, its success led to significant pushback from a covert, illegal, secret government group. As the documentary's impact grew and it began to change perceptions on the subject, this group responded by promoting Tom DeLonge, whom Dr. Greer had previously mentored when he was a young rock artist in Blink-182. DeLonge ultimately defected from Dr. Greer's project and joined forces with Luis Elizondo, a former Pentagon counterintelligence master on these issues, who then took up the mantle of disclosure.

The intent, however, was to steer the narrative away from the full truth, focusing instead on partial truths:

- 1) Acknowledging the reality of unidentified aerial phenomena but claiming no technological understanding.
- 2) Denying knowledge about the nature of these objects.
- 3) Denying possession of such technologies.
- 4) Labeling these phenomena as national security threats.

Elizondo is a highly skilled operative, trained by individuals who had historical ties to significant intelligence events, such as the Bay of Pigs in 1962. His rise in the media helped infiltrate and influence the UFO subculture.

Following the documentary, several significant leaks occurred, including the widely publicized 2004 Tic Tac UFO incident off the coast of San Diego, among others. These leaks prompted Congressional inquiries and the passage of preliminary legislation in the early 2000s aimed at investigating these phenomena, led primarily by the Senate Armed Services Committee and the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence.

A few years ago, senior staffers to the Senate Intelligence Committee, chaired by Senators Warner and Rubio reached out to Dr. Greer. After a year of being stonewalled by military bases and corporations, they invited Dr. Greer to Washington.

In a Sensitive Compartmented Information Facility (SCIF), accompanied by some of his team, the senior staffer expressed frustration at the lack of progress. He inquired about what Dr. Greer could provide. Dr. Greer offered any information they needed to advance their investigation.

Lengthy meetings then took place. These meetings, held for the Senate Intelligence Committee, were intense and eye-opening, lasting about three hours. Dr. Greer committed to compiling all the necessary information for the committee members.

Despite being retired from his role as an emergency doctor and lacking a formal staff or office, he promised to organize whatever resources he could and began listing all the relevant categories.

Senator Warner expressed a desperate need for this information. Since then, Dr. Greer has been collaborating with senior members of the Senate Intelligence and Armed Services Committees and, more recently, with members of the House Oversight Committee, including Congresswoman Luna, Rep. Burchett, and Rep. Moskowitz.

As of March 2024, however, the open hearings with subpoenas for all these whistleblowers that were initially requested in 1993 and again in 2005 have not been arranged.

The list of whistleblowers continues to grow, with new individuals coming forward every few weeks. This ongoing influx of new information ensures that the archive is an ever-expanding, living entity.

This initiative eventually led to the creation of the Disclosure Project Intelligence Archive, which was developed in response to a request from the chairs and staff members of the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence and the Armed Services Committee, who asked Dr. Greer to provide them with all the available information.

Dr. Greer offered to provide the assessments and Presidential Briefings that had already been compiled, including the briefing document prepared for President Trump and a secret video briefing created for Vice President Pence and President Trump.

Going back two or three years, there was an initial plan for about 30 people from the Government Accounting Office (GAO) and a private contractor based in Alabama to be covertly funded through Congressional, Senate, and military budgets to collaborate with Dr. Greer. The goal was to thoroughly organize and digitize content so that it would be accessible to the intelligence committee, the White House, and their associated contacts, including supportive figures within the Pentagon and CIA. Dr. Greer agreed to work with them, but the plan was ultimately blocked.

After this setback, and knowing the information was still critically needed, Dr. Greer decided to take on the task independently.

The team (very small - paid and volunteer) began to organize the massive amounts of information. They then had to figure out a practical approach to make the archive functional, searchable, and accessible. Had the U.S. government allocated adequate funding, perhaps 10 to 20 million dollars could have been deployed for proper staffing and execution.

Dr. Greer shifted his approach to consider why such vital information should be confined to bureaucrats and politicians in Washington. Even if the House Oversight or Senate Intelligence Committees were to begin exhaustive hearings with all the whistleblowers today, it would take over a year to cover just a portion of what the archive offers.

He decided to make the archive accessible globally, to every individual on Earth. There is a Bedouin saying Dr. Greer learned while living in the Sinai: "Trust in God but tie your camel." In this context, tying the camel means making the information available worldwide.

This disclosure initiative, regardless of media recognition, is driven by the public's right to know in what is supposed to be a Constitutional Republic Democracy.

The challenge was to develop a website that could handle simultaneous access by millions of users without crashing, allowing easy navigation through extensive content. Ideally, such a project would require 5 to 10 million dollars and several years to complete. Despite being underfunded and understaffed, he was determined to complete the task.

There was also an urgent need for a secure hosting solution that would not be compromised or taken down by any government or corporate entity. This is critical to ensure the site's longevity.

The Disclosure Project Intelligence Archive (DPIA) contains approximately 9,000 files across 20 categories, with each category having subcategories. Some of these files are extensive, containing hundreds or even thousands of pages, and there are over 800 videos, ranging from hours-long presentations to brief clips of UFOs.

These files are made accessible through Optical Character Recognition (OCR) and can also be quickly searched by specific fields. Managing such a vast array of documents involves opening each file, interpreting and transcribing the contents, and manually inserting descriptors to ensure they are instantly retrievable in search fields. This monumental task requires a considerable amount of time and manpower, relying heavily on a team of trustworthy volunteers.

Structurally, the DPIA is designed with a public facing "front end" that includes:

- DPIA Intelligence Briefings Modules

- The Black Budget
- Close Encounters of the Fifth Kind (CE5)
- Illegal Government False Flag Programs
- Major Historical Cases - like the Cash Landrum reports and briefings
- Presidential Briefings
- Congressional Briefings
- The Asilomar Meetings
- All known UFO Crash Retrievals to Date - numbering around 130 major cases
- Government Documents from a dozen countries including the U.S. and the former Soviet Union
- UFO-related Secret Facility Locations
- UFO Videos and Photos
- All Witness and Whistleblower Testimonies.

One significant challenge has been the necessity to redact personal information contained within Dr. Greer's personal files, including names, email addresses, phone numbers, and any other sensitive information such as social security numbers found on military discharge forms (DD 214). This ensures that all information released to the public, as well as to members of Congress and White House staff, has been appropriately redacted to protect the privacy of the individuals involved.

Creation of this redacted archive involved ensuring that only the information approved for public disclosure by the sources themselves is made available. The only names disclosed are those of individuals who have expressly permitted their names to be used.

Should Dr. Greer believe that someone genuinely needs to know specific details, they will be given access to the unredacted, carefully curated, authentic information. For example, if a certain Senator X shows genuine interest and sincerity, which Dr. Greer has determined through personal meetings and interactions with the senator and his staff - not merely out of curiosity but with serious intent - then Dr. Greer would provide the requested information with full disclosure, trusting that the senator would keep it confidential.

Many witnesses, some of whom are of significant importance, have entrusted their lives to Dr. Greer.

Approximately 80 to 100 of these witnesses are publicly named, and all their testimony and correspondence, with personal identifying details removed, will be made accessible to the public.

For other witnesses, any information they have shared through emails or notes will be included in the archive, but their names will remain confidential until they give explicit permission for disclosure.

As the founder of the Global Disclosure Project, Dr. Greer ironically keeps secret about 90% of everything he knows to preserve the trust placed in him. This necessity creates an internal conflict both within his organization and personally.

Dr. Greer has resolved that the public deserves access to all the information, warts and all. The process of redaction is ongoing, and the public DPIA still requires significant organization to ensure that all information is presented clearly and effectively.

The top priority documents and individuals are labeled in subcategory one. The remaining items in this category are organized by the nation of origin of the whistleblower, with the majority being from the United States.

[\[See document #115482\]](#)

Turning to the witness list, the names are initially displayed but then the list switches to coded numbers, continuing for several pages. This list describes the topics that the witnesses will discuss.

The public will receive access to this comprehensive and raw intelligence, including Dr. Greer's handwritten notes and debriefing records.

In addition to specific categories, there will be General Briefings. These are not tied directly to the other categories in the archive but address broader issues such as:

- The methods of maintaining secrecy
- The techniques used in counterintelligence.

These aspects are crucial for understanding the overall landscape, especially since they are not well understood by Congress, the President, or National Security Council members, who have not been fully briefed or read-in on these matters.

The current NSC needs comprehensive overview briefings, which underscores the significance of this category in the archive. However, it comprises mostly text and information, which Dr. Greer aims to enrich by linking to documents and cases that substantiate the assessments.

Dr. Greer has become proficient in creating intelligence assessments since he first began in 1993 for the CIA director. With 31 years of experience, these assessments have become a crucial part of his project and emphasize the importance of interaction during these briefings.

This is part of Dr. Greer's larger goal to digitize and compile all data related to Unidentified Aerial Phenomena (UAPs), UFOs, and extraterrestrial entities into what could be considered the Wikipedia of these topics.

This massive endeavor has been challenging. Dr. Greer acknowledges that perfecting the archive could take a year, emphasizing the necessity of progress over perfection due to the urgency of the situation and the complexity of the world today.

In December 2023, the National Defense Authorization Act, which is the funding bill for the Pentagon, encountered significant issues. Dr. Greer had played a crucial role in drafting a bill that had successfully passed both the Senate Intelligence and Armed Services Committees.

This bill would have required aerospace corporations, contractors, and individuals involved in unsanctioned programs to disclose all materials, including extraterrestrial bodies and crafts, within six months of the bill's passage.

It was overwhelmingly approved by the Senate and unanimously by the Senate Intelligence Committee.

At Dr. Greer's insistence, the bill emerged from the committee advocating for an amnesty provision that would allow participants in these illegal programs a period to come forward and transition their operations into ones sanctioned and overseen by the President and Congress, in alignment with constitutional oversight.

There is no civilization where there is no law.

However, during the conference committee negotiations between the Senate and House, key individuals in the House blocked and removed these crucial provisions from the National Defense Authorization Act, an action Dr. Greer attributed to corruption. Those responsible have been identified and reported to FBI/SWAT teams, not as a threat but as a promise of legal enforcement.

Dr. Greer prefers that these matters be addressed through open hearings with subpoenas, supported by both the White House and National Security Council, as well as Congress. This has been his consistent request for the past 31 years.

The urgency surrounding these issues increased after Dr. Greer suffered a critical injury in October 2023, which nearly cost him his life. Despite his physical trauma, he remains actively involved in these advocacy efforts.

Although impossible to control the timelines or actions of the White House or Congress, there are significant developments related to these issues that the public needs to be aware of, emphasizing the ongoing challenges and the potential for major changes in how these matters are handled.

In April 2023, a highly ranked Special Forces officer was tasked with establishing a law enforcement strike team within the continental United States to secure various sites containing extraterrestrial crafts, bodies, and technologies, and to dismantle the operations managing them illegally.

Dr. Greer had been striving to engage Congress in a systematic and lawful approach, but the situation escalated when the officer expressed his and his Pentagon colleagues' frustration. They identified themselves as the 'have-nots' - those within the chain of command who support legal government operations, referred to as Team Blue, and were growing increasingly discontented with the obstructionism from Congress and the White House.

The Special Forces team was given comprehensive, unredacted intelligence on all relevant facilities and personnel involved in these covert operations, including locations of deep underground military bases and hidden assets. This information was provided to facilitate the team's preparation for sanctioned intervention, not as part of an unsanctioned or illegal action.

The plan is to take decisive control of every implicated site. The leader of this operation visited Dr. Greer a month after the June National Press Club event, signaling their seriousness by stating their readiness to use lethal force if necessary and presenting Dr. Greer with a symbolic pin representing their unit, indicating their global and covert operational scope.

By March 2024, Dr. Greer had attempted to get Congress to legally mandate cooperation from major defense contractors, including:

- Lockheed Skunk Works
- Northrop Grumman
- Boeing
- Raytheon
- E-Systems
- SAIC
- EG&G

This initiative was initially supported and signed into law, mandating a six-month compliance period under threat of prosecution. However, this directive was ultimately removed within the House by the end of December 2023.

Members of Congress, the White House, and military officials have been personally informed by Dr. Greer about the potential for these Special Forces to proceed independently if the legal routes continue to be blocked. This approach, while not ideal, is seen as a necessary response to the ongoing failure to address the issues legally.

The gravity of the situation cannot be overstated. That this course of action, although extreme, is one of the few remaining options to address the illegal activities associated with these classified projects.

A month before the National Press event in June 2023 in Washington, a highly positioned operative, working under non-official cover (NOC) in an unauthorized secret government program related to UFOs, approached Dr. Greer. This individual is deeply involved in these operations. Dr. Greer has visited his facility and flown over secretive sites, gaining comprehensive insight into their operations.

The operative and his group have grown extremely discontented with the continuous delays and inaction in Washington, particularly by Congress and the White House, which he described as being "missing-in-action." While there has been some progress with the National Security Council, the slow pace and perceived incompetence in Congress continue to frustrate.

Following a briefing to an unnamed Congressperson, an FBI agent labeled Dr. Greer a 'Red Flag' and warned the Congressperson to disregard his information. This reflects the significant surveillance and control this group has over communications within the U.S. government.

The operative's group is closely collaborating with Dr. Greer and his team, and there is a planned transition for these Special Forces operators to engage domestically under a sanctioned, albeit classified, capacity. This transition involves separating from the military to engage legally yet covertly on the targeted facilities.

Dr. Greer has also engaged with a group of deep defectors, including their leaders, who are also exasperated with the current situation. They are considering what they term a "catastrophic disclosure," which involves publicly releasing all their information, including footage from GoPro cameras on retrieval teams that document the collection of deceased extraterrestrial bodies and crafts. This material will be included in the archive.

In a recent and significant development, Dr. Greer received a message from the director of the law enforcement effort, informing him that the FBI has agreed to provide protection to the whistleblowers.

Another group involved in these unauthorized programs is deeply disturbed by the ethical implications and potential dangers their activities pose to Earth.

One individual, who previously worked at the Nellis facility known as Area 51 and was responsible for monitoring communications within the S4 chamber, revealed that there is also monitoring of interstellar communications:

It has been conveyed that continued aggressive actions against extraterrestrial crafts and beings could provoke extraterrestrial entities to intervene directly on Earth to mitigate the damage.

This scenario, escalating from a controlled disclosure that Congress has failed to manage, could potentially lead to a more kinetic and violent outcome, with the term "kinetic" in military jargon referring to violence, suggesting possible confrontations on American soil between different elite military groups, such as Delta Force and Green Beret type operators.

Dr. Greer is actively working to prevent such a scenario, but his warnings remain unheeded. There is a real possibility that this group, frustrated by the slow progress and aware of impending risks, might independently initiate a massive, unplanned public release of classified information. Dr. Greer is in constant communication with this group, providing them with necessary information as they prepare what could be an extremely disruptive disclosure.

This situation underscores a critical urgency; these insiders believe that immediate action is necessary to rectify the situation, given the potential consequences of inaction. It is clear that those involved are aware of what is fast approaching. They understand that the current timeline has reached a critical point where these issues must be resolved - more urgently than many realize.

It is not only the collapse of the biosphere, pollution, and the withholding of world-changing technologies that are the issue, but the existence of active advanced weapon systems. These systems have the capability to lock onto and manipulate the guidance systems of extraterrestrial vehicles, directing them into strike zones where they can be disabled by electromagnetic pulse or scalar weapons.

Dr. Greer has witnessed these operations firsthand and is in possession of video evidence of these illegal electromagnetic pulse (EMP) weapons, which violate the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty. He provided this video to Senate Intelligence Committee members in October 2023, shortly before his accident.

From Dr. Greer's perspective, with over three decades of involvement, he sees the current situation as an inflection point demanding resolution. He believes that if political leaders continue to fail in addressing these issues, the responsibility will inevitably be taken from them.

These concerns have been repeatedly expressed directly to several members of Congress, stressing the severity of the situation and the necessity for immediate and serious action. Without significant change, control will shift away from traditional governmental structures, and the outcomes will be severe.

Three potential scenarios could unfold outside of congressional hearings:

- A strike by a law enforcement team comprised entirely of former Special Forces
- Catastrophic public disclosure by insiders from the secret, illegal programs
- Direct intervention by extraterrestrials.

These extraterrestrial entities, while non-hostile, will not tolerate continued aggressive actions against their crafts and their people. Such interventions are driven by the extraterrestrials' refusal to allow ongoing attacks that began in the 1940s, indicating their patience has reached its limit.

Current human technologies have advanced to such a degree that they pose an existential threat to other worlds, not just to entities entering Earth's atmosphere. This scenario is acknowledged as the worst-case scenario by Dr. Greer, Special Forces personnel, top whistleblowers, and a group intent on defecting from illegal programs.

During the premiere of Dr. Greer's documentary "The Lost Century," a Special Forces individual assigned to Dr. Greer's security picked him up in a heavily armored vehicle similar to those used by the president. This person, not the leader but a member of his team, expressed his gratitude to Dr. Greer for his efforts to assist those trapped in the covert, illegal sector, seeking liberation.

Interestingly, the law enforcement Special Forces team, known by their motto "to liberate the oppressed" in Latin, "De Oppresso Liber," reflects a similar sentiment.

As of March 2024, the outcome of these developments remains uncertain, but Dr. Greer continues to update on the situation, acknowledging the disturbing nature of these events.

During a recent incident in Mexico where the government dismissed certain artifacts as mere dolls during a congressional session, illustrates a classic example of how counterintelligence operates within ufology: credible evidence can be mishandled by trained operatives to appear ludicrous and discredit the information.

This tactic has been used for decades. The founder of The National Enquirer, Generoso Pope Jr., was a CIA Psychological Operations (PsyOps) specialist, using Mafia funds to establish his tabloid. This strategy ensures that any significant UFO story, if associated with The National Enquirer, is likely to be dismissed due to the publication's reputation, thereby undermining the credibility of the information.

General Odom, the Director of the NSA, had a right-hand person who met with Dr. Greer years ago and authenticated The Marilyn Monroe Document. It outlines why Marilyn Monroe was going to be killed the following day. This NSA associate carried a briefcase literally handcuffed to him.

Upon retiring, Gen. Odom described a deceptive tactic used in intelligence circles known as DDT (Decoy, Distract & Trash) which involves setting up a decoy operation to distract from the actual matters of interest and then discrediting it.

This tactic of DDT has been applied to the Peruvian Mummies of Nazca. The scheme involved tomb raiders passing relics to individuals who would then ensure these items reached those known for buffoonery and charlatanism within the UFO community.

The Nazca mummies were initially discovered seven years ago, near the area of the Nazca lines. Over 60 mummified bodies have been found, including some with unusually large skulls and hands. They date from 1000 to 6500 years ago and have been categorized into six different species.

Some of these mummies are notably small, around 18 inches tall, while others, with 14-inch hands, are estimated to have been 10 to 12 feet tall. These findings also included metal implants and were covered in a thick layer of diatomaceous earth, indicating they were buried in a network of catacombs rather than a single tomb.

[\[See document #127525\]](#)

Recently, Dr. Greer discussed these discoveries on a news show with Congressman Burchette from Tennessee, following a major public reveal of the mummies. When asked for their opinions, Congressman Burchett dismissed the findings as a hoax.

In contrast, Dr. Greer, adhering to his scientific and medical background, reserved judgment pending further evidence, such as DNA results, CAT scans, and anatomical dissections, emphasizing his commitment to evidence-based conclusions. His measured and factual response reflected this disciplined approach, which is not typically associated with ufologists - a label from which Dr. Greer distances himself, preferring instead to be recognized for his substantial medical credentials.

Unfortunately, like many topics in this field, once information reaches the public, it often becomes subject to poorly conducted analysis from a scientific standpoint and dangerous buffoonery that serves to discredit it.

In conclusion, if the Nazca mummies are indeed real extraterrestrial entities, then the need to retrieve fresh bodies and crafts from underground bases through a “kinetic” law enforcement strike team assault would not be necessary.
