Dear Mr. and Mrs. [REDACTED]

I enjoyed meeting with [REDACTED] in Las Vegas. I hope we too can get together in the not to distant future. It's odd, but I recognized [REDACTED] in the hotel lobby after all these years. We had several discussions about our lives, and of course the Roswell thing.

This subject matter is new for me. Had I not read [REDACTED] [REDACTED] book, I would have never asked dad if he recognized any of the names in the appendix. Since Mr. [REDACTED] I didn't know your first name was [REDACTED] I would have never put two and two together.

I realize this publicity must be uncomfortable for you. Unfortunately, as I'm sure you're aware, it isn't likely to go away. As you know, the Air Force officially admitted that the weather balloon was a cover story. Their decision to announce that the crash instead was a Project Mogul balloon wasn't wise either, since it took very little research to point out the fact that the Russians didn't explode their first atomic bomb until August 1949, and that Project Mogul wasn't conceived until long after the Roswell crash.

The Army Air Corp photographer, [REDACTED] (maybe his real name - maybe not), has broken secrecy rules and sold film footage - lawfully government property - to Ray Santilli and the BBC. The ethics of this move leave a lot to be desired, but maintaining secrecy of the information contained on the film is now a moot point since the cats already out of the bag. (The BBC has already aired some of it). According to material on the Internet, future programs to be aired include Harry Truman doing something with the wreckage.

[REDACTED] has now thrown his millions into the ring, and plans to produce a movie titled Roswell, due to be released in 1997. I would be surprised if you hadn't already heard from him.

██████ may have told you that I have written two novels, and several screenplays, although none concern UFO's. Should there be anything to this Roswell story, and should you someday decide to tell it, I would be thrilled to write your story for free. I told Joe I would help him or you write and organize the material only if it was agreed that I would receive absolutely nothing in the form of compensation, or credit.

This would allow you to eventually direct attention away from yourselves and be left alone. It would also allow you to leave a legacy for your family or to the charity of your choice.

Whether or not you believe humanity has a right to know, it appears that cameraman Jack Barrett has have taken that step ahead of you, especially if the preliminary results on the 1947 film prove correct...that it was shot on Cine Kodak Super XX, an Army film type discontinued from manufacture in 1957. The Kodak twenty year codes on the film indicate it could have been made in 1927, 1947, and except for the fact that the film type was discontinued, 1967. ██████████ apparently saved everything and has produced a chain of proof to show that he was at Roswell at the time (he has some still photos showing him with people known to be there as well).

I have to admit, initially the creature looked like a dummy to me...but the autopsy looked very convincing. Further, had the whole procedure been a film hoax from the late forties, or early fifties, Hollywood would have made films left and right using the technology. Keeping in mind that Star Wars was made in 1977, and ET in 1982, we quickly realize the ability to make such a creature artificially in 1947 didn't exist. Back then they used real people covered with make-up. Even the masks were poor. If this is film from 1947, this greatly increases the likelihood that the film is what it says it is...an alien autopsy. I enclose a free copy of part one of three. It is the first thirty minutes of 91 total minutes of film. I have also sent a few pages of supplemental material, including the Cameramans statement. Mr. Cavitt, if the Roswell incident was the crash of an alien craft, I have no doubt you will recognize if the film is authentic. You will be able to form a conclusion before the results come in from Eastman House and the independent labs currently involved in chemically authenticating the age of the film.

The video made from the 16mm film shows 16 minutes of autopsy. The footage is from different reels and is NOT consecutive. It is followed by roughly four minutes of tent footage of wreckage, then four minutes of tent footage of a medical procedure (who knows what) The latter two are then digitally enhanced to remove grain then repeated. As I mentioned this total video is about one third of the total footage sold to the BBC. The remaining footage is scheduled for release before year end.

Since [REDACTED] said you received a release from your oath of secrecy, please reconsider. I'll work with you on your terms any way you wish, and keep confidential anything you request. I know you wish to be left in peace, but this whole matter is out of Pandora's box now.

On a lighter note, all is well here. My mom just had a knee replacement operation and is doing well. Dad is still on the golf course three times a week. I know they would love to hear from you, or to see both of you if you could be convinced to visit.

I'll anxiously wait to hear from you.

Best wishes,

[REDACTED]
