

Subj: Re: books and pilot
Date: 2/14/01 3:41:40 PM Eastern Standard Time
From: d [REDACTED] (Don & Terry Daniels)
Reply-to: d [REDACTED]
[REDACTED]

Witness info

[REDACTED] wrote:

> Hi [REDACTED]
> UPS will be picking up your signed books today. I will charge your card > $138.86. ($120 for the books and $18.86 for UPS).

Thanks! I am down to my last copy, other than the ones Steve personalized for the members of my family.

I am protecting those and don't even like to open them up to read them. A couple of editing notes I found on my re-read, which I may or may not have already sent:

Page 33, mid page. The main Roswell event I am familiar occurred I believe in 1947. You make reference to Roswell in 1957. Is this a typo, or is it correct?

Page 37, 2/3 down. It is all too easy. Should probably be (too) easy.

I would be most happy to interview you witness. I know what his is going through in school. It is like drinking from a fire hose for over a month. I have one more trip next week, (assuming my sinuses clear up, and then I am on vacation until March 11th. I got an ear block monday, and stretched my eardrums a bit. Could not clear it all day tuesday in Orlando, even with the humidity, standing in a hot shower for over half an hour, and slogging it with Alkalol mix. I even got some Afrin from the store, and could not get things opened up. It wasn't until today as we climbed through a cabin altitude of about 5000' that my ears opened up. I knew it was all basically uphill Cabin Pressure Wise to Denver, but there was no way I would have gone another leg back to sea level. Medical checked my ears with all their fancy gadgets, and while I stretched the eardrums a bit, I did not rupture them. They put me on occupational leave / No Fly status until they clear. Hopefully they will recover with no hearing loss.

The co-pilot I just flew with had a sighting from a commuter airliner he was flying a couple of years ago. He is quite interested, and has your book on loan or buy status right now. He read the first 100 pages last night. I put him in touch with [REDACTED], and he may even come to Crestone this summer. [REDACTED] is his name. Can't be all bad with a name like that. Funny, when I pulled out the CSETI card, he looked at the Triangle logo, and said that was uncanny, it was exactly what he had seen.

Pilot