Subject: foley

Steven:

You need to talk to Foley ASAP; he has a contact here who possesses a metal sample from what this guy believes is the jettisoned propulsion system from the Roswell crash -- found hundreds of miles from the impact site, buried by a farmer who was aware of the furor caused nearby in Roswell, who apparently instructed the son, then 7, that one day, he might dig this up when it was less controversial. The sample -- and entire system -- according to Foley's contact -- is for sale. I guess Stanton Friedman has a similar sample and is having tests done. I can't verify any of this but Kevin held the thing and said it has tiny fiber optic pieces running through it like capillaries: It heated up when he held it in his hand.

Call me when you can about these media interviews -- and an update about the Starlight progress. Hope your spirit is up and health is holding.
