

FROM: [REDACTED]

Re: Roswell Wreckage

Folks:

Read the following from my good budd, [REDACTED]:

Mark

>

>

Subj: Roswell Museum

Date: 96-03-28 03:41:29 EST

From: [REDACTED]

Mark!

Have you heard that somebody (a guy from Texas) actually turned in a piece of the debris from the Corona crash site?

He claims he got it from one of the Army Air Corps guys who were ordered to clean up the site. He stuffed it somewhere I guess and hid it for years. He then gave it to the guy from Texas who actually put it in some sort of frame and kept it safe all these years. Now with all the publicity, I suppose he felt it was time to open the closet.

The museum spokesperson says yes they have it. That it has "unusual properties" and is now with a metallurgist for analysis.

Hmmm.

Another alien autopsy film?

Or...

I like the sound of this one. Sounds more believable somehow. And it's real tangible evidence, not third generation copies of something which may or may not be real!

Do you know anybody who has access to the folks at the museum? I guess it's a public thing at this point. Let's hope it doesn't mysteriously disappear now. Into the MIB Museum of Things You Can't See Because of National Insecurity.

Now here's where somebody like Clinton ought to step up to the plate and say hey, if I get this stuff out in the open, will you re-elect me?

Hell, yeah. He'd even get MY vote...ooo it hurts just kidding about it!

Keep Doggin' Markie:-)

[REDACTED]

File

BAE!!