

FROM: INTERNET: [REDACTED]m, INTERNET: [REDACTED]om
TO: (unknown), INTERNET: [REDACTED]m
DATE: 2/1/98 11:25 AM

Re: Mr. President! Mr. President!

File Basett

Sender: [REDACTED]m
Received: from dfw-[REDACTED]m (dfw-ix4.ix.netcom.com [206.214.98.4])
by arl-img-2-[REDACTED]m (8.8.6/8.8.6/2.10) with ESMTP id
LAA17009;
Sun, 1 Feb 1998 11:24:41 -0500 (EST)
Received: (from [REDACTED])

From: "Mark L. Center" <[REDACTED]m>
Reply-To: e-[REDACTED]
Organization: Outta Hear Productions
X-Mailer: Mozilla 4.02 [en]C-DIAL (Win95; U)
MIME-Version: 1.0
To: [REDACTED]m
Subject: Mr. President! Mr. President!
Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii
Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

FYI: This e-mail was sent to me by Philip Mantle.

Mark L. Center

Francisco Lopez wrote:

From: Dale Stonehouse <[REDACTED]m>
SearchNet's IUFO Mailing List

I picked up about 6 books at the library tonight, one of which was Sarah McClendon's Mr. President!
Mr. President!

McClendon has covered the White House since 1946 and has been a pain in the ass for 11 presidents.

One short chapter is entitled Roswell, New Mexico, 1947: America, 1996:

Quoting:

"In 1947, the McClendon News Service had the El Paso Times among it clients. Back then, the Times was the largest paper serving New Mexico and part of Arizona, as well as the far west of Texas. So when a strange story out of Roswell, New Mexico reached Washington DC, I showed up to cover what has become, to many minds, America's greatest "cover-up."

I'm sure you've heard the story, but if the government had just been straight with us, you probably never would have. It would have stayed the kind of item found buried in the pages of the local newspaper, not the stuff of endless media speculation, pseudo-documentaries and TV movies.

In mid-June, some odd debris was found on a ranch near Roswell, New Mexico. When, later that month, a pilot in Washington state reported an encounter with nine glowing disks that "skipped like saucers" across his flight path, the ranch manager in New Mexico told the local sheriff about the debris he'd found. The sheriff called the Roswell Army Air Field. On July 8, the Roswell Daily Record headlined an Army press release saying they had recovered the wreckage of a flying saucer. Within hours, the military changed its story: the debris which they had confiscated was merely a lost weather balloon.

Over the years, this incident has mushroomed into a national obsession. Except for the widespread skepticism over the "official explanation" of the Kennedy Assassination, there is probably no subject on which more Americans doubt our government is telling us the truth. Rumors have spread like wildfire that not only is the government hiding physical evidence of alien visitations but that they even have some of the alien visitors themselves, dead or alive, stowed away under top secret security.

End of quoting.

She goes on to talk about why people doubt what government tells them and the consequences today. It is quite interesting.

Two things I think are quite significant are the fact that a reputable reporter has said the crash actually occurred in mid-June, 1947, and she actually covered it. No one else has reported that to my knowledge. And that none of the endless Roswell investigators have even acknowledged her report (also only to my knowledge).

I suspect almost all of the Roswell coverage (including Corso's The Day After Roswell, I am sad to say) has been disinformation after disinformation. The encouraging thing is that only an event of such enormous magnitude would require such massive disinformation efforts.

Someday we will know the truth.