

TTSA Drill-Down Assessment

For: Dr. Steven Greer

By: John Warner

Date: 10/19/2017

Re: "To The Stars Academy"

• Joel McLeary knows Dr. Norm Kahn:

I have known Joel for 30 years and consider him a friend. He was married to my second cousin Lavinia Courier (A Mellon). He is almost family, and knows my father well.

Funny that he knows Dr. Kahn, a bio-weapons expert, or perhaps not so funny.

Joel is a former "consultant" to the Intel Community and is regarded around DC as an eccentric, Buddhist-minded "genius." He knows all about ye olde subject, and won't return my calls. To me that's unsettling. —JWW

• Dr. Adele Gilpin:

Regulation of Research on Human Subjects: Academic Freedom and the Institutional Review Board.

A quote from this AAUP report: "It also spent a considerable sum on intramural research on human subjects, that is, research on human subjects conducted directly by government personnel at government facilities."

Website:

<https://www.aaup.org/sites/default/files/files/2013%20Bulletin/humansubjects.pdf>

Uh-oh...that's a tad scary. Dr. Gilpin seems perfect for TTSA. One wonders just what experiments on human subjects are being conducted at those, ahem, "government facilities?"

Overall on the TTSA website, there's lots of emphasis on combat trauma medical research and viral weapons. That reads as concerning. —JWW

• Youtube Promo Video for TTSA:

Link: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Zr9196VzOFw>

JWW: Very bland, purposefully vague, and somewhat condescending in my opinion. Regarding said video, one woman's searing comment read:

"Thank you, Tom Delong, for trying, but these guys are really PART of the problem, not the solution. They are looking to redeem themselves, because they HAVE NO honor or integrity. They lived rich lives at our expense, they have access to things we can't imagine, and now they want us to fund them AGAIN...OR WE WON'T GET ANYTHING. And who is to say whether it's even what is really available technology-wise. I know you're trying, but until these lying, deceiving bastards come out with EVERYTHING, rather than feeding us scraps that we have ALREADY FUNDED. They can go to their graves with the secrets for all I am concerned. "IT WASN'T MY JOB TO TELL THE PEOPLE".. WELL HOW ABOUT YOUR MORAL AND ETHICAL OBLIGATIONS? WHAT, YOU THINK YOU SUDDENLY 'GREW' THESE WHEN YOU RETIRED? This is like a child trying to blame the dog for breaking something. It's pathetic."

Yikes. Don't sugar-coat it.

I wish I could have said it better, but I cannot. —JWW

• My Summation:

Given that our horse sense intuition is a genuine, highly tuned skill...this is a snap.

To me this TTSA initiative smacks of limited, scripted disclosure as a way to profit off of technology that we, the public, have already paid for ten times over. Although some of the founders may have benevolent intentions regarding the public's current and future needs, most are quite "spooky," and all have worked for the Nat. Sec. State in some capacity. Who knows what's NOT included in their bios?

Bio-weapons, genetics, medical miracles, free energy, antigravitics, spacecraft, and consciousness research all in one deal? Wow. Strange bedfellows, indeed. What skullduggery, perchance, are they up to? Redemption at the taxpayer's expense? The new, pretty face of "approved" disclosure? The banal beginning of the Intel Community's safe & secure 50-year disclosure plan? Possibly.

If...Chris is planning on making a profit from his involvement, then I have no respect for him whatsoever. We Mellons have inherited our money and influence from a legacy of corruption, war profits, and greed, and in my opinion we should all start giving back in a concrete, meaningful way with no regard for credit of any kind. My 10 cents, don't you know.

I'm not sure why he's in contact with you in the first instance if this is indeed the case. Is Chris at least on board with your "the-public-has-a-right-to-know-everything" agenda? All of his behavior intrigues me to no end, and that's not a good sign. (Usually speaking). That said, I'd like to get to know him and try to understand his point of view if he's amenable to that, blood being thicker than high pressure synthetic Red Mercury.

It seems moral and ethical concerns in this arena are as illusory as some of our "Country Cousin" ETs have stated. I.e.: the struggle between good and evil, moral and immoral, should only be seen as an imbalance in our positive/negative reality. A reality we create for ourselves every blessed, goddam day. So don't take it personally, it's just business as usual. At least that's what I keep telling myself.

Overall though, I'd say this small "d" TTSA initiative is still a good thing since public awareness of any stripe is a primary focus for all involved in Disclosure with a big "D." But Jesus H. Christ driving a Ford, these TTSA folks better get a "vice" grip, for what side of history do they genuinely want to land on?

"Gosh, gee willickers, why is the public so ungrateful? My colleagues and I were only trying to help the ignorant, puerile, and distracted American people understand the really big universe with our cool rockstar front man to shepherd us. Don't they know that's relevant, groovy, and hip? Am I missing something?" —Jim Semivan

As you well know, PhDs, high degrees, IQ scores, Harvard-Yale this or that, and fancy MIC resumes mean little as far as true, open-minded intelligence is concerned, though I do regard Tom DeLong as a fellow creative and right-brain fellow. Yet I fear he may have been mislead by some dark forces, their smiling lips painted a bright metallic pink to match their carbon nanotube Raybans, their black hats highly sequined in gold.

In the near future, these TTSA folks—may—serve as poster children for endemic government criminality in the end, especially if their real goal is corporate control of limited, formerly above top secret technology in the public sector while lining their soon-to-be silken pockets in the process. A $50M offering? Really? Why aren't they funded by one of the black slush funds? That's chump change. Window dressing. Where's Elon Musk on this? Too busy creating better nuclear batteries for black triangle craft?

Involving the public and its purse might be a proof-of-concept vehicle for the black hats to mire us in their illegal, unconstitutional machinations, blurring as many legal lines as possible. My worry is that the public might swallow their unrefined pabulum if TTSA gains real traction and bigtime media coverage. The result? Many more John Q. Public palms would be blackened with the soot of USAP corruption, the public's ears ringing with confusion and resentment.

My Rx? Meditation on Ayahuasca might suffice as a panacea for the TTSA team. And that's not a joke.

*Best,
JWW*