

"UFO'S A SECRET GOVERNMENT PROJECT?"

by Robert A. Stiff,
IUFOD Director

One of the most popular 'explanations' used to dis-credit the authenticity of ufo sightings is the belief of many that the objects are, in reality, 'top-secret' government projects and that no connection with alien life forms exists between them. This belief has freed many minds from pondering just what is really there and what it may represent to our future.

On July 1st, 1965, Maurice Masse, a farmer of Valensole, France, sighted a 'beetle' shaped object resting on the ground not far from his home. The French government explained the object as a new type of helicopter being developed under 'secret conditions'. However, the facts of the case tend to remove the chance that the object Masse sighted and any new helicopter the French might have been developing were one and the same. There is also the striking similarity between the Masse sighting and that of Eddie Laxton on March 23, 1966 near Temple, Oklahoma, USA. Both Laxton and Masse recieved the 'project' explanation despite the fact that no new prototype has yet been introduced by either government since these alledged 'tests' were conducted.

If we are to consider the possibility that these objects are in fact government projects there remains many questions that must be answered. For instance, why are tests of un-proven craft being conducted over highly populated cities, including the capitol of the United States, without any precautions being taken to protect the populace? If the objects are 'top-secret' why are they placed before the public in such an open manner instead of being tested on the vast government-owned test ranges of Nevada and New Mexico? Also, does it not state somewhere that nations are not supposed to fly craft over other countries without permission? Ufo sightings are reported from around the world which would mean that we, or some other power, have test vehicles over the territorial domain of every nation in the world.

The truth of the matter is this: Ufos are not government projects, nor are they top secret. They are as much a mystery to the various governments as they are to us. Those persons using this 'explanation' are merely grasping at any theory that will eliminate the chance that they might have to think.

One of the visitors pointed a tube at the farmer which paralyzed him.

about 4 feet in height and was wearing a diving suit: "His head was large with respect to the rest of the body, and he had two enormous eyes. The suit was bright and shiny like glass." The craft was surrounded by a sort of glow. One of the witnesses approached within 20 metres of it, but was paralysed. The craft took off throwing him on the ground, and it rose very fast.

Case 186 (Vallee) - In Isola (near La Spezia, northern Italy), a farmer saw a bright cigar-shaped craft land near him and hid himself. From the machine came three dwarfs dressed in metallic diving suits, who centered their attention on the farmer's caged rabbits while speaking among themselves in an unknown tongue. Thinking they planned to steal the animals, the farmer slipped away, returned with his rifle, and aimed at the dwarfs. Then two things happened: first the rifle failed, and at the same time it became so heavy that the farmer had to drop it. He also found that he was unable to move or speak, while the intruders took the rabbits and left, their craft leaving a bright trail.

The bizarre encounter in Ohio was investigated by the Flying Saucer Investigating Committee of Akron, Ohio (3): the witness has requested anonymity, although his name and verbal testimony are on file. The witness finished his shift at 2:00 a.m., March 28, 1967, and was travelling a road near Akron still wet and slick from an early morning thunder shower. As he passed over a hill, his attention was attracted to a red glow nearby and as the man glanced to his left, he saw a large cone-shaped object, about 25 to 30 yards from the roadside.

With his car window down, the witness discerned an odor which he described as resembling "hot brass." The UFO, hovering 2 feet above the ground, was roughly 25 feet in height with a base of about 12 feet. Suddenly, the man noticed 4 or 5 figures scurrying back and forth across the road in front of him. The figures were 3½ to 4 feet tall with short stocky legs, long arms and large heads. Each was surrounded by an orange glow. The driver applied his brakes, but the slippery road prevented him from stopping before he collided with one of the strange creatures. Instinctively, the man opened his door to investigate the accident, but not knowing what he would be faced with, returned to his car and left the scene. Fresh scratches and dents on the grill and headlight of his car indicated the young man had struck something but no evidence could be found at the landing site of the object or of the impact.

To be sure, there are many differences in these summarized reports, but these differences could be the result of the different interpretations of visual stimulations by the various witnesses. This is the prime reason why scientists are far more interested in multi-witness sightings where they can compare and assess events involving more than one observer. On the other hand, by looking at some very obvious analogies in the four cases from France, Italy, Australia and the U.S.A., one must conclude that these far removed individuals were very possibly describing parallel situations. Fanciful falsehoods simply would not reflect such similarities even on a localized scale, and we are dealing with a global phenomenon!

Yet another account of occupants comes from the town of Rinkerode, Germany. A movie projectionist, Herr Hoge, was returning home on the evening of October 9, 1954, when he saw what he first thought to be an aircraft making an emergency landing. About 250 feet from the road, Hoge noticed a blue light that emanated from a cigar-shaped object sitting on the ground. Beneath the craft were four figures dressed in rubber-like coveralls busily engaged in some sort of work. The figures were each 4 feet tall and had large chests and heads.

Again in France, an intensive investigation followed a fascinating report that took place near Valensole on July 1, 1965. Coral and Jim Lorenzen, co-founders of the Aerial Phenomena Research Organization (4), outlined the particulars of the case in their book Flying Saucer Occupants (Signet, The New American Library of Canada Ltd., Toronto, Ontario). Maurice Masse was working in his lavender field early in the morning when he heard a high-pitched whistling sound. As he rounded a pile of stones he saw a football-shaped craft resting on six "legs" in the field. Masse started toward the object and suddenly noticed two beings apparently examining one of the lavender plants. When Masse was about 25 or 30 feet from his visitors, one of them pointed a tube at him which immediately had the effect of paralyzing the farmer in his tracks. Masse was still cognizant of what was happening and later described the two individuals who invaded his field. They were "little men", about the size of an eight-year-old child, dressed in coverall garments. They had huge heads and their skin was white and smooth. The sounds made by the pair were unintelligible and, according to Masse, did not originate from their lipless mouths. Moments later, the two re-entered their ship and sped away at a 45-degree angle.

The occupant reports from Miss Doreen Kendall, the Cowichan District Hospital nurse, and Fred Yoos of Olds, Alta. outlined in issue no. 7, are merely further evidence of the UFO-ETI idea. Readers will recall Miss Kendall had been on duty January 1, 1970, when she saw a huge, silvery UFO through a ward window at 5:00 a.m. The bowl-like object was topped by a translucent dome through which the nurse saw two figures clothed in tight-fitting suits. One of the occupants seemed intent on manipulating the controls of the craft while the other watched Miss Kendall. After circling slowly in an anti-clockwise direction for a few moments, the UFO moved away from the hospital and receded in the distance. Mrs. Frieda Wilson, a nurse working with Miss Kendall, arrived in time to see the object hovering near the children's ward just prior to its departure.

Fred Yoos was performing his watchman duties July 1, 1969, when a 20-foot elliptical machine landed not 50 feet away. Through openings in the side of the strange object, Yoos detected the movement of two figures. Apparently the visitors noticed Yoos, too, because they abruptly stopped their activity to take note of the startled gentleman. As suddenly as it arrived the craft rose swiftly into the air and vanished. Yoos later said the green coloured UFO was about 14 to 16 feet through the middle and roughly 10 feet deep.

We urge you to read the detailed accounts of these sightings in Volume 1, No. 7 and then compare them with the following reports, each of which took place thousands of miles away. Mrs. Eileen Moreland, a farmer's wife from Blenheim on the South Island of New Zealand, had risen early one morning, during the latter part of 1968, to attend to her cows. A mist hung over the paddock as she proceeded to set about her tasks. Unexpectedly two green lights appeared through the haze. Mrs. Moreland's immediately thought she was observing the moon under unusual atmospheric conditions, but as the "lights" appeared to move toward her, the woman became aware of a shape behind them. Soon, the saucer-shaped object was only 15 feet above

UFO landing in France

On July 1, 1965 Maurice Masse (local farmer of Valensole France) sighted a strange "beetle" shaped UFO which had landed near his home. The craft had an elliptical egg shaped body, with what appeared to be a streamlined crew compartment on the top. The outline of a door was seen on the left side of the UFO. At least four landing gear legs were visible, with a strange center column which extended down to the ground. Officials from the French government claimed that the object was a new type of experimental helicopter undergoing test flights. Source: July/August 1968. This particular sighting bears a striking similarity to a case reported in Temple Oklahoma on March 23, 1966 (confirmed by NICAP). Eddie Laxton (electronics instructor at Sheppard AFB) was driving to work west on U.S. highway 70 at 5:05 AM when he noticed a "fish shaped" UFO land on the road 300 feet ahead of him. The object measured approximately 75 feet long, eight feet high, and twelve feet long. It had a clear Plexiglas bubble canopy on top, with bright lights on both the forward and aft ends. Mr. Laxton got out of his vehicle, and walked to within 50 feet of the craft when he noticed the label/designation "TLA138" or "TLA738" written along the side. He also saw a man wearing a "mechanics hat" and military fatigues climb a set of stairs into the vehicle which departed with a strange "hissing" sound towards the southeast at an estimated speed of 700 mph. Additional confirmation on this sighting came from the Hynek UFO Report pages 208-210. The fact that no rotor blades were reported in either case rules out conventional helicopters, and appears to lend credibility to the craft reported by author Nick Cook in his book Hunt for Zero Point on page 3.
