Subject: Part 2 of [REDACTED] report
To: Steve Greer <[REDACTED]>

So the following day of the mysterious disk shaped object recovery, we had to report to the Coast Guard land station at Marsec at 0900. I can clearly remember the exact time due to the fact that I was happy to be able to sleep in a little. Cause my usual workday started at 0700. But I also can remember it as being the absolute most terrified I've ever been in my entire life. The previous day's events had me so unnerved that I was really convinced that I was either going to be silenced or killed or would possibly have my memory erased like Men In Black Style. I remember now that there was a Navy Admiral that was present at our debriefing and he was the one that did all of the talking and was in charge of the situation. Also present was the executive officer of Marsec and maybe two other Coast Guard officers that I did not recognize. We were first commended for our efforts and also reminded of the classified nature involving this weird object we had pulled out of the water and in that explanation the Admiral described it as an experimental Navy craft. There was one really intense moment and a bit of excitement when the commanding officer of my ship, Lieutenant Commander Corson broke in and seem to interrupt the Admiral when he said that comment about it being an experimental craft. I recall him being very heated and passionate and he very boldly seem to bark back to the Admiral that he knows damn well that whatever that thing was it was not made by humans and he mentioned that we have often seen this very same craft doing impossible things in the sky. And I seem to recall him mentioning several specific dates he already had memorized and he referred to the fact that our ship had logged quite a few sightings of UFOs that looked identical, and he made it very clear that he wasn't happy about being lied to and he used the word "bullshit" at one point in his statement to which I couldn't help but feel so much respect and I was so very proud that at least he had the guts to call such a superior ranking officer out like he did. Now surprisingly, the Admiral was very calm and didn't seem to be that offended at the blatant disrespect he was just shown from much lower ranking officer, and the Admiral very calmly told him that he would speak to him in private as soon as the rest of us were finished with the debriefing and he did stay behind once we had all left. We all were forced to sign a nondisclosure agreement and we were verbally warned to tell absolutely no one about this incidents, not even our spouse children, etc. And that this was of some of the highest levels of secrecy in existence I do remember it being described as "Above Top Secret" so I knew that it would be best for me to keep my mouth shut and I did for many years now. We were told that if we were to violate the NDA that we would be subject to punishment under the UCMJ and could possibly be charged with treason which as we all knew could possibly carry the death penalty. However, interestingly enough, we were never actually threatened with death directly as I understand that some other military witnesses that have come forward about similar incidents of this nature of secrecy have been threatened with in other cases.

And to sum things up, having been one of the very few people on board the Cutter that had been part of the actual physical craft retrieval team, I experienced some brutal treatment in the form of bullying from many of my fellow shipmates. This was very extreme and it devastated me really bad. To the point that I suffered some really bad depression as a result of this mistreatment, and thankfully my CO was a very approachable guy and even a lowly junior enlisted guy such as myself was always welcome to go up and speak to him. And I did quite a few times after that. But alot of my mistreatment was due to

to the kind of us vs them mentality between officers and enlisted sailors. And the entire ship's crew had to be addressed at morning muster on more than one occasion about never bringing that subject up ever again. So while we were over at the shore unit, Marsec during our debriefing, apparently the rest of the ship's crew had also had a similar kind of meeting and they were (from what I was told) basically only told that yesterday officially never happened and that they were also to never speak of it ever again.

So I just wanted to finally send you the part about the debriefing we had to go through. If there's anything I might have left out or if you have any questions at all for me, please feel free to reach out. I heard you mention in an interview with Paola Harris about some kind of Roswell type incident in 2002 and you mentioned Guam so I immediately got excited and thought that maybe you had another witness come forward perhaps or that you were referring to my experience. And either way, I'm happy to do my part in helping to try and figure out what all has been going on out there in that part of the world. Thanks again sir, for all that you do for humanity! And many blessings-
