

Something Out There

CSETI's Dr Steven Greer Interviewed

CSETI IS THE ONLY WORLDWIDE ORGANISATION DEDICATED TO ESTABLISHING PEACEFUL AND SUSTAINABLE RELATIONS WITH EXTRATERRESTRIAL LIFE-FORMS.

Because he wanted to make contact with extraterrestrial life-forms, Dr Steven Greer set up the Centre for the Study of Extraterrestrial Intelligence (CSETI). In this exclusive interview for ALIEN ENCOUNTERS, Christopher Kenworthy probes Greer about his life and work.

Dr Steven M Greer isn't your typical UFO researcher. He is a medical doctor, who believes in direct, practical research. Rather than simply speculating, Greer wants to expose secrets and contact aliens. He founded the Centre for the Study of Extraterrestrial Intelligence (CSETI) in 1991, and is now the International Director.

CSETI is the only worldwide organisation dedicated to establishing peaceful and sustainable relations with extraterrestrial life-forms. Through CSETI's Project Starlight, Dr Greer aims to expose evidence of secret UFO-related projects, raising public awareness of the phenomenon. He also believes in the most exciting form of research, which involves establishing friendly, civilian communication with aliens. On several occasions, Dr Greer and his trained working groups have initiated close encounters of the fifth kind - attracting UFOs and actually communicating with them.

Dr Greer talks with great passion and enthusiasm for his subject. There is no doubt that he believes every word he is telling you, and that in turn helps you to believe. Although his stories challenge ordinary thought, they hint at how interesting and challenging our near future may be. I asked him how he first became interested in the subject.

"After having seen one of these objects, when quite young," he said, "I saw a disc-shaped craft, late in the afternoon. There was no mistaking what I saw, but at that age people said, 'Well sure, these things don't exist'."

Like most witnesses, Greer was ridiculed, but his interest didn't wane. His sighting, combined with the fact that his uncle was working on building the Lunar Landing Module, helped to fuel his interest in things other-worldly.

Avoiding The Circus

Greer saw more unusual objects during his late-teens and twenties, which is quite a common occurrence. Once you've seen one UFO, you tend to see more and more during your life. "People see more than one, quite frequently," explained Greer, "but the explanation for that isn't altogether clear. It could simply be that most people never look at sky. You learn to look up, because you're aware of something out there." Once that has happened, Greer points out, your life can change dramatically. "A sighting is life-altering in terms of our paradigm and our place in it.

When you find out a ridiculed subject is real, it is disturbing." It was quite a leap from these initial sightings, for Greer to set up CSETI.

It involved a lot of effort, so why did he think it was worth investing so much time and money into ufology?

"I founded CSETI because the subject is important," said Greer, "and I wanted a full scientific review, with real-time scientific investigations. I saw that we needed research in the locations where these objects are being seen." Although this seems quite obvious, CSETI is just about the only organisation that homes in on UFO windows, in an attempt to observe, and set up communication with extraterrestrial life-forms.

Despite the excitement surrounding such projects, there is a lot of frustration in ufology at present, and some people are getting desperate for a 'big disclosure' about alien reality. Dr Greer is certain the disclosure will come. "That's what we're working on. We have capacity to do that," he says, indicating the vast stockpile of evidence CSETI has gathered over the past few years. Project Starlight consisted of briefing more than 20 congressional offices, and selected media representatives, showing them the 'best available evidence'. This evidence was made up of documents, videos, photographs, and most importantly, 15 witnesses to UFOs, and related secret projects. That was the start of the process, but Dr Greer says that more information still has to be released.

"The question is when, by whom and how," says Greer. "We have over 100 top secret witnesses and definitive evidence. But we're not going to be revealing it at the next UFO conference, because then all we get is ridicule from the weirdoes and crackpots." This shows that, far from being somebody who simply tries to please the crowds, Dr Greer is committed to his cause. Although he wants to generate public interest in the subject, he doesn't want to waste his evidence in a forum (such as a UFO conference) where it would have a minimal impact on the world at large. The danger, he pointed out to me, is that many conferences are turning into carnivals, and cites the 'circus' at the Roswell Anniversary as evidence that the subject may be being taken too lightly in some quarters.

Another problem, he says, is that media coverage is nearly always misguided or hostile. "The media are too arrogant to get out of their own way and investigate the phenomenon."

Making Contact

One of the most interesting areas of CSETI's work, involves going beyond theories and secrets, and actually trying to interact with extraterrestrial intelligences. A close encounter of the fifth kind involves participation by the witness, taking humans from being passive observers to a valid part of the contact experience. According to CSETI it is about "mutual, bilateral communication rather than unilateral contact." With CE5, participants consciously attempt to initiate contact with ETs. This sounds like a great idea, but does it actually work?

"We've collected over a hundred cases where people have signalled and initiated contact with these objects," says Greer. "Sometimes they just happen to be driving along and have a sighting, but when they signal, flashing their headlights, they can cause the object to signal back or even land."

CSETI has developed systems used for initiating CE5, by studying case histories and seeing how they've been effective. "We have found that lights, lasers, sound and radio signals all have a part to play," explained Dr Greer, "but the objects are also attracted by a very bizarre, high-strangeness component. There is the apparent ability of an object, or ET craft, to respond directly to thought. It's at this point that scientists fall off their chairs. But let's start with the basic premise that these are interstellar craft.

"They would have to evolve real-time communication over vast distances."

This is a reasonable assumption, and gives credence to the idea that aliens might be able to home in on directed thought, from groups of individuals willing to make contact. According to the stories that Dr Greer and other members of CSETI have to tell, these contact techniques are remarkably effective.

"When you go through the light barrier, there is a bizarre potential. What we call thought is actually quantifiable and can interface with technology," suggests Greer. "There is 'consciousness assisted technology', and 'technology assisted consciousness'. This is why 'clearly directed thought' can help to initiate a CE5 event. It's bizarre, but it happens to be true. We're going to have to step out of our 20th century thought and technology."

Although this field work is exciting, Dr Greer says that CSETI projects are taxing on his own resources. "There's no real funding," he states. "I've invested a million and a half dollars of my personal time and money. We've never had the equipment to do this properly, but what we have done is set up operational teams of trained individuals to obtain highly credible reports. They attempt to engineer a CE5 interface. At Monterey we got overflies, signalling, landing or hovering over the ground, and these life-forms projected their awareness into the group."

I then asked him if aliens were actually present. "We saw a scintillating light in the shape of a humanoid," he replied. "It wasn't a vision, because it's seen by all of us. But it's not like Spielberg's Close Encounters of The Third Kind, with the aliens stepping out and shaking hands. It may happen this way for various safety and security reasons. Their appearances are furtive because our military are monitoring and tracking them.

"This is why we have projects such as Starlight, because we have to reveal that some people on this planet are trying to destroy ET craft. We have to let the ETs know that we are willing to enter a rapport and communication, rather than attacking them with pulse beams or weapons."

Willing To Interact

Some of Dr Greer's accounts contain remarkable sightings, and stories of lengthy interaction and signalling. "In Monterey, as we arrived the chauffeur pulled to a stop," said Greer, "and on a sheer mountain side we saw a light like a star, where there was no electricity. A person could not get there at night, but we saw a blue-white light. I said, 'My god, they're here,' and signalled to it."

"The object expanded into a huge light, around which we could see a disc-shaped craft. Later, we could see humanoid shaped figures moving around the craft. They projected a sort of intelligence to where the group was."

"We've shown what could be done, but we need more equipment," says Greer, stating that in an ideal world, he would have helicopters, aeroplanes, and masses of recording equipment to hand. He

THE BIG DISCLOSURE

Perhaps the only way around the misguided media coverage of UFOs, is for the 'big disclosure' to be so large, that it can't be ignored. "We would like an open hearing of congress, or an inquiry at the UN," explained Dr Greer, "but these traditional avenues are difficult."

"People in authority think these issues can't be true, otherwise they'd know. Or, they know there's some truth, but believe it's too frightening. The implications are so profound and far reaching, the stakes are so high, it's intimidating to take this subject on." Despite this, he says, there are those involved with covert operations linked to ufology, who are ready to speak out. "People who know, in the relevant sectors, are extremely concerned."

Why then, I asked him, is there so much secrecy? If the subject is real, if UFOs are visiting Earth, and if our governments know, why is the secret being kept at all?

"It's a self-serving positive feedback loop," explains Greer. "There are vested interests in the industrial and military complex. There's no good reason why it should be kept secret. The technical benefits of disclosure would include incredible propulsion systems, and new energy sources."

believes it would be worthwhile because, "The phenomenon is real, it is extraterrestrial in origin, and these extraterrestrial intelligences are willing to interact peacefully with civilians. Until now, there has been no serious civilian effort. Millions were spent on the Close Encounters film, for example, but nothing is spent on actually getting out there and studying the phenomenon in real-time.

We need to demilitarise it. Between 50 and 60 percent of Americans believe it is real, but there's not one dime of public money being spent on studying it. We can do something. People can form civilians teams, and go out where these things are being seen, and at the very least set up a reconnaissance and observation stations. But you can go further and initiate contact when the objects are seen."

CSETI even provides a training kit, which helps people to set up their own groups, and each year several training events are organised in various 'window' areas. One area that CSETI have visited repeatedly is Wiltshire in England, because of the presence of UFOs and crop circles. Dr Greer believes that there is more to the circle phenomenon than the mainstream media are willing to admit. "A number of them are clearly not hoaxed," he states. "The phenomenon is aerially based, orbs have been seen drifting around them or down out of the sky. A template is laid down almost perfectly.

"We have had teams up there since 1992, and we've see UFOs in the vicinity of circles. Once, a 150 foot diameter disc came the field, ten feet above the ground, signalling to us for 15 minutes. The circles that aren't hoaxed are of ET origin; it's not a language, but archetype symbols, like Mandalas. A pre-verbal communication. They resonate in consciousness."

I asked him if the extent of the hoaxing problem ruined the subject, but he said hoaxing is something that happens alongside a real phenomenon.

"In my work as an emergency doctor, I've had patients pee in a cup, and prick their finger to put blood in it, just to get narcotics. That doesn't mean everybody who reports kidney pain is a liar. If we get caught out sometimes, so what? There's no reason to be ashamed, but we should be highly suspicious."

"A [UFO] SIGHTING IS LIFE-ALTERING... WHEN YOU FIND OUT A RIDICULED SUBJECT IS REAL, IT IS DISTURBING." — DR STEVEN M GREER

Although seeing a UFO is a dream for most people, Dr Greer believes that is only the beginning. "We've seen thousands of these objects; it gets boring. What we want to do is go beyond that. Let the ETs know we have a brain, that we're not just a cow in a field looking up at them."

CSETI continues to have successful sightings and contacts. Recently, in early November 1997, a 30-strong team, sensed that extraterrestrial intelligences were present. "Above us, below a full moon, a large disc appeared, then vanished," related Greer. "Everyone saw it. Luckily we had a scientist there, who saw it and was astounded. But it can happen at any time."

We can only hope this continues to be the case, and that Dr Greer and CSETI will eventually gather enough information to bring about the 'big disclosure. It's tempting to believe that with this level of enthusiasm and dedication, that time will soon come.

Cure For Society's Ills

Greer believes that we have been back-engineering alien technology for over 50 years, and that it is already 'fully operational'. The problem now, however, is that the secret has to be kept, to maintain the power hierarchy. "The multi-trillion dollar question is what next; these people don't want this on their radar screen," he says, implying that those in power want the secret to be kept just as it is.

"The planet is dying meanwhile. Ironically, the solution is locked up in ultra secret projects." Dr Greer believes that current social, economic and environmental problems are all curable, with technology that is kept secret by those with knowledge of alien technology, but believes that disclosure will still occur.

"The release of this information in the early decades of the new millennium, would change the geopolitical balance of power," says Greer. "When every village in India and Africa can generate their own power, they won't be tied into the petrochemical, industrial world complex. We will see the empowerment of previously disenfranchised masses."

To many people the subject of ufology consists of little more than stories of strange lights at night, but Dr Greer shows the actual scale of the subject. He has even had talks with a sitting director of the CIA and National Security Agency, on the subject of UFOs. The most stunning discovery for him was that the CIA aren't in charge of the secrets. "It's not controlled by the CIA or the government," says Greer, "[and the] public has not been educated to the extent of this problem."
