Steven Greer and others have pointed out that the most highly secret UFO-related govt. activities have been largely "privatized" at this point, which lends some substance to official govt. denials of involvement with ETs, etc. The notion of a "satellite government" would seem to go hand in glove with the notion of privatization; i.e., would constitute the

The Satellite Government

A secret program was begun in the late 1940s after a series of UFO crashes in the southwestern U.S. provided the government with proof of alien presence. Apart from the famous Roswell incident, there have supposedly been crashes at Aztec, New Mexico and northwestern Arizona near Kingman in May 1953; Hardware, bodies and even some live ones were recovered, and government officials were pressed to decide what to do. To protect what was found at the disk crash sites in New Mexico and Arizona, the Truman Administration scrambled for a decision as to who in government would carry the responsibility. This included security, material, personnel, documents, military and civilian intelligence as well as scientific study and "development" of recovered technology.

It was finally decided by the Eisenhower administration in early 1953. A group was formed by the President, and the chairman of the group was then Vice President Richard M. Nixon. Around June of 1953, the final decision was made to set up a "SATELLITE GOVERNMENT." This separate entity would interface with the U.S. Government for support only. Personnel involved in any part of disc retrieval, including first hand knowledge, were reassigned as satellite government entities. Additionally, new security requirements were established and new clearances assigned. Dr. Edward Teller has long been high up in the satellite government "Organization."

What the information people like Congressman Schiff of New Mexico are looking for is NOT in the known governmental chain of agencies, but only in the exacto facto organization described above. That's why Rep. Schiff couldn't get anything out of the archives about Roswell. Currently, the National Reconnaissance Office (NRO) and select compartments within the National Security Agency and CIA are among the principal interfaces with our
