Military Identifiers Revisited

By Steve Douglass

Last February, Intercepts published for the first time, what we thought was the most comprehensive list of military identifiers. Since then we have received, from our dedicated monitors, many more callsign lists. Intercepts had planned to publish a revised list of identifiers at the end of this year, but due to the many changes in the USAF's structure, we decided to print the list this month. Many of these changes are reflected in the listings. As you go through the listings, take note. Some of the callsigns have no identification as to base, type of aircraft, etc. It is up to Intercepts subscribers to help all military monitors to fill in the blanks. Many thanks to all those who sent in their lists. If the new listings generate as much mail as the old one did, then Intercepts subscribers are well on their way to having the ultimate callsign listings.

IN THE WINGS

PULSERS STRIKE AGAIN

More sightings of strange "Donuts-On-A-Rope" contrails, like the one photographed by your Intercepts editor, have been sighted over parts of the United States and Europe recently. The contrails are believed to be produced by secret "black" hypersonic, high altitude aircraft belonging to the USAF. The new sightings suggest that the aircraft is now undergoing test flights during daylight over many areas of the globe and is not being confined to a secret test area. In late January, one of the distinctive contrails was seen over Scotland, trailing behind a very fast aircraft moving from east to west. Intercepts reported in April that a hypersonic aircraft was reported on civilian radar controller's screens near the U.S. Air Force base near Machrihanish, Scotland. Previous sightings over Scotland suggest that a hypersonic aircraft could be undergoing flight testing at the Machrihanish air base. Other sightings have been reported during daylight hours over Portland, Ore.; Washington Dulles International Airport, Denver, Colo.; and Edwards AFB, California.

U.S./GERMAN SPYPLANE

Details of a joint U.S./German reconnaissance aircraft developed under the program name of "Senior Guardian" have been revealed by the Pentagon. The project was revealed when it was threatened by budget cuts. The project called LAPAS (Airborne Stand-off Primary Reconnaissance System) in Germany and Senior Guardian in the U.S. is threatened to be cut during a German review of all defense programs and its fate has been put on hold until officials decide whether to continue to participate in the EFA (European Fighter Aircraft) program.

The Senior Guardian airframe is based on a design known as the "Egret", a high altitude, long-endurance-over-station, manned aircraft, powered by a single turboprop engine. The aircraft is constructed of composite materials so the aircraft has excellent stealth qualities. With a planform similar to the Voyager aircraft, the aircraft was designed to loiter over an area for a long time, providing real-time-signal-intelligence and optical imaging. The wingspan is said to be similar in length of that of a commercial Boeing 737. No photos of the aircraft have been revealed as yet. The joint program is a collaborative venture between E-System's Greenville division in Texas, (electronic systems) and Burkhart Grob Luft und Raumfahrt gmbh & Co. KG (Grob), Mindelheim, Germany, which manufactures the airframe. U.S. Defense Secretary Dick Cheney has sent two letters to German defense officials urging the continuation of the program. The Egret airframe was researched and developed between 1986 and December in a $400 million German program.

The first "Egret 1" proof-of-concept vehicle was first flown in 1987 and a follow on aircraft "Egret 2" was also developed. A decision on whether to build between 10 to 15 Egrets was to have been made in mid-June but procurement could be delayed until 1994.

Live from Psyops its Saturday Night!

A special upgraded Air National Guard EC-130E, capable of broadcasting color television signals in support of psychological operations is being tested by the USAF and Lockheed. Known as either "Volant Solo" or "Rivet Rider" the aircraft can transmit on standard AM/FM radio, television, shortwave and a host of other communications band and overpowering standard broadcasts with broadcasts or its own. Four ANG C-130s are being converted to the upgraded "worldwide color television" configurations and another two aircraft may be funded to be modified as well. The aircraft will operate in USAF's "Psyops" psychological warfare missions designed to break the enemy's will and to disrupt an enemies broadcast communications. The EC-130Es can also be used in disaster situations to broadcast emergency messages such as evacuation instructions. During an emergency the aircraft can also temporarily substitute for disabled ground transmitters or expand the coverage area of existing ground stations by rebroadcasting received signals. EC-130Es were used successfully in Panama during "Operation Just Cause" to disrupt Manuel Noriega's efforts to command his troops via television broadcasts and to instruct Panamanian citizens to remain in their homes during the invasion. During the Persian Gulf War, three aircraft were used to transmit messages to citizens in Kuwait City, and were instrumental in convincing Iraqi tank crews to abandoning their vehicles and surrendering.

INTERCEPTS FACT FILE

McDonnell
Douglas
KC-10A
Extender

Editors Note: On Dec 19, 1977 the USAF announced that following evaluations of the Boeing 747 and McDonnell Douglas DC-10 to meet its requirements for an Advanced Tanker/Cargo Aircraft (ATCA) the DC-10 ATCA was selected to fill that role. The aircraft was designated KC-10A "Extender". The KC-10 has greatly enhanced the USAF's ability to deploy combat aircraft, supplies, armament and troops to anywhere in the world.

Only 17 KC-10s are needed to deploy a squadron of F-15s including men, material, fuel and armaments to a foreign staging area as opposed to a force of 40 Boeing KC-135 tankers. The modifications necessary to convert the DC-10-30F to tanker configuration includes the installation of fuel cells in the lower fuselage, provisions for a boom operator station and aerial refueling boom, a refueling receptacle, cargo handling system, and military avionics. Various seating layouts are available in the forward area to permit the transport of a fighter squadron's essential support personnel. Seven bladder fuel cells are installed in the lower fuselage compartments, three forward and four aft of the wing.

The KC-10A Extender is an advanced tanker-cargo aircraft providing U.S. forces with increased global mobility. Operated by the Strategic Command, the KC-10 provides aerial refueling for many types of aircraft, including fighters, bombers, and cargo aircraft deploying overseas.

Primary Function: Aerial tanker and transport.
Prime contractor: Douglas Aircraft Company, McDonnell Douglas Corporation.
Power plant/manufacture: three General Electric CF6-50C2 turbofan engines.
Thrust: 52,500 pounds each engine
Dimensions: Wingspan 165 ft. 3 in., length 181 ft. 6 in., height 57 ft. 7 in., cargo space-12,000 cubic feet
Speed: More than 500 mph
Ceiling: 42,000 ft.
Range: Unrefueled- 11,500 miles
Crew: Four-pilot, copilot, flight engineer and operator
Maximum load: 350,000 lbs.
Maximum takeoff weight: 590,000 lbs.

INTERCEPTS BBS!

Have a computer and a modem and need the latest inside military monitoring information?

The INTERCEPTS BBS is where you'll find what you need to be on the cutting edge. Operating 24 hrs. a day and accessible from any computer. The INTERCEPTS BBS is where you will find the monitoring data you need to help you hear more, meet other monitors and get the information that the dedicated monitor demands. INTERCEPTS is an open computer forum where military monitors can exchange ideas, frequency information and meet other who share our unique hobby.

Need frequency information?

INTERCEPTS frequency service can get you the information you need, when you need it. You can leave electronic mail for INTERCEPTS and request information you want. You can even page a systems operator and communicate in real-time to a monitoring expert to request information, pass on an idea or just chat! You can also leave private messages for other Intercepts members or post frequencies and loggings in our public forum!

The INTERCEPTS BBS can be your system for only a small yearly fee of $50.00 (includes all BBS privileges and a one-year subscription to the INTERCEPTS NEWSLETTER) or you can subscribe to the BBS alone for $45.00 a year. No additional charges (you pay for the call). Subscribe now! Send check or money order to Steve Douglass INTERCEPTS BBS, 6303 Cornell, Amarillo, TX 79109 or if you would like more information write us! Send a SASE for complete details.

Intercepts Monitor Registration

In an effort to better organize our members and broaden our information base, serious military monitors can now register as an official INTERCEPTS MONITORING NETWORK STATION.

For $10.00 registered members will receive their registration number (callsign), an 8 x 10 Intercepts monitoring station certificate (printed with name and registration number on a frangible parchment paper) verifying that you are a serious member of Intercepts Monitoring Network.

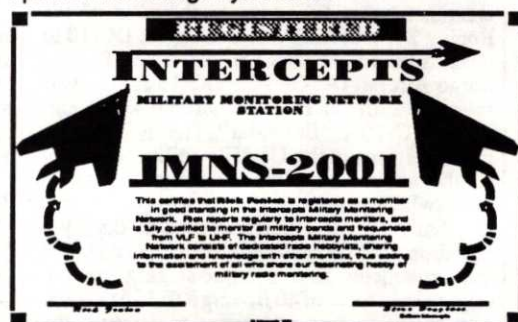

Registered monitors will also receive a custom frequency printout of the Air Force base of your choice (limited to bases in the lower 48 states) or our list of the top 100 military shortwave frequencies.

INTERESTED?

This certificate looks great framed and hanging in any monitor's shack and the custom frequency printout is well worth the price.
