

To: (unknown), Dr ET
From: [REDACTED], INTERNET: [REDACTED] m
Date: 7/7/99, 11:25 PM
Re: Fwd: [REDACTED]!! Guess who?

✓ mss
7/13/00

smf

>From: "SDAI" [REDACTED]
>To: [REDACTED]
>Subject: [REDACTED]! Guess who?
>Date: Sat, 2 Jan 1999 06:15:07 -0800
>
>Hi [REDACTED]

Witness?!

>I received your article and enjoyed it immensely! I was unaware of the >links between the sounds and UFO sightings. I am also very curious as to >the triangular region this phenomenon seems to be mapping in the >pacific-northwest area.

>
>I am sorry I didn't contact you earlier but I have been away from my >computer and in Arizona for several days. In two weeks, I will have to >return to Phoenix for another week (one of these days I will save up for a >laptop with internet access).

>
>I have also been doing a little research on [REDACTED] - and have checked >out his website and news releases. He seems to be sincerely interested in >the UFO field of study. The only thing that gives me slight concern is the >e-mail gathering program inserted prior to accessing his on-line book.
>While I do not think he will sell them to anyone - I have the feeling he is >concerned about who is reading his piece.

>
>His anti-government stance is a bit risky. To the untrained >government-type his message probably appears to be a bit revolutionary.
>After documenting in depth the formation of compartmentalization in his >book - by his calls for the government, especially the President, to >release this data - he seems to overlook the most obvious - the president >is compartmentalized AWAY from this knowledge. The President could >investigate - as I am certain Carter did, and be kept from much of the >compartmentalized government programs which study, accumulate and >disseminate data about UFO's and their activities.

>
>One of the more predominant groups of UFO trackings and investigations is >compartmentalized off of the NSA, the National Security Agency. Every day >hundreds of UFO's are recorded over the nations cities. These 'bogies' >defy most physics laws and bounce around radar screens like a mouse-pads >cursor. The NSA is charged with protecting our nation from foreign >intruders and interests. These objects easily classify as a potential >foreign interest. The NSA also operates many of our most sophisticated spy >satellites which have also captured images of these crafts. (Spy >satellites do NOT just have cameras pointed towards the earth. In this era >of laser equipped anti-satellite satellites, they are most certainly >equipped with 360 degree imaging cameras to track and observe hostile >satellites which may approach them. It is these imaging systems which >would likely detect UFOs.

>
>We like to think that spy satellites are limited to our earth. But such is >also untrue. The moon is (and has probably been for many years) orbited by >spy imaging satellites. You can use your imagination as to what other >planets may be orbited by NSA/military hardware. The sum of images and data >collected by these satellites alone would constitute a significant proof of >UFOs being unidentified SPACEships. By now we can assume that they have >recorded various STYLES of craft and have even determined capabilities of >some of these craft as well.

>
>At advanced levels, the military, NSA, DARPA and other agencies have >certain relationships. For instance DARPA, the Defense Advanced Research >Project Agency may pursue a study and projects in an advanced scientific >field for a military agency expressing interest in such a field. DARPA is >never really informed WHY such technology is wanted and pursues the >technology blindfolded, to some extent. The contractors too, are equally >blind as to what their efforts will support.
>
>So this military agency very likely then takes this technology and employs >it in their classified satellites and craft. Their efforts are likely >unified with a compartmentalized branch of the NSA spy satellite team.
>
>Then some buffoon officer gets it in his head to lay to rest Roswell and >provides materials and bogus 'classified' data to a junior officer to write >and publically release.
>
>Such behavior is perhaps the surest proof of extraterrestrial existence yet >released. Project bluebook and other projects have always been simply >charades for the benefit of the public.
>
>The problem is that the vast majority employed by the military and even the >NSA - are unaware of all this vast accumulated data proving UFOs and their >clearly extraterrestrial origins. If they suspect such - they are also >likely aware of the dangers inherent in being outspoken in such an >occupation.
>
>Certain astronauts are also very likely eye-witness observers of these >UFO's and their reports are classified by NASA. NASA, while ostensibly a >civilian agency, has countless such TOP-SECRET classified reports and the >astronauts could probably be executed for treason if they spoke publically.
>The power of classification is great and fear is a powerful motivation.
>Yet ignorance is still the primary reason nothing has ever been publically >disseminated.
>
>Even if a news agency were approached - there is no guarantee such material >would be aired or released. If we look at the recent Clinton-Broadrick >MSNBC fiasco, we see that political intervention effectively controls many >of our 'free media'.
>
>The people who are relatively safe are the ones who can be classified
>'nuts' or 'a little looney' - these which are easily discounted are no >'threat'. (Joe's 'summoned being' talking to him over his bed - true or >not - gives him a bit of a 'looney-shield' - and I would have advised him >to incorporate such in his public presentation had he asked. Since he is a >'financial figure' he will naturally be a more high-profile threat. This >allows his efforts to be discredited as 'loony' - for were this not >included it would be even more threatening a piece to the 'powers that be') >The compartmentalized agencies in question are also limited in their reach >to an extent. They cannot utilize the rest of the military apparatus >except in indirect manners. So your average MP cannot harass or threaten a >UFO researcher. Such would have to be performed by a compartmentalized group >attached to the military or NSA. These types would be very few in number - >lest they, themselves, spill the beans on who they receive orders from and >point towards a compartmentalized group.
>
>Disinformation becomes the great tool. Lying, misleading and outright >fabrication are the reality of these government programs. I seriously >doubt we will see proof of UFOs emerge until more privately funded >satellites incorporate these same advanced imaging systems. (they will also >have to be privately launched and such capabilities concealed from major >launch industry establishments - which are likely infested with agents >observing and sabotaging such craft that are so equipped) Whenever we hear >of a big launch failure - you can bet that the cause is over 75% of the >time due to espionage from either internal or foreign sources. The Russian >mars program has had many such failures - most recently the MARS96 craft >which failed to achieve orbit, is one likely candidate of an 'accident'.

>
>The MGS in orbit over mars now, which is mapping that planet almost >assuredly has military links and filtering of such imagery as ends up in >the hands of civilian researchers. [REDACTED] the camera makers and imaging >operators for this and future satellites - also manufacture lenses and >cameras for CLEMENTINE and other previously classified military imaging >satellites. (They don't use Kodak, Canon or Fuji - wonder why....;-)
>
>[REDACTED], who operates out here in SD and is almost assuredly linked to a >compartmentalized branch that filters such data, is but one example of how >our extrasolar missions (ostensibly run by NASA) are really gutted of >important information by such invisible groups.
>
>
>Well enough cloak and dagger for now ;-)
>
>Again, I really enjoyed your article and I wonder what in the northwest >region is attract such attention.
>
>Some of my first thoughts on the matter:
>
>A) Mount St Helens and the perhaps unstable geography of the region may be >of concern?
>
>B) Radiation storage facilities may be of concern?
>
>C) ?
>
>As for the beeping throughout the EMF spectrum - this makes me think of a >homing beacon. Perhaps the result of a stable field being generated so >that frequency manipulating craft can return to these spots more easily - >by homing in on these temporary fields. If a craft uses frequency >navigation (which I suspect advanced craft do use since every planet and >spot in time/space has a unique set off interacting frequencies to identify >them) then they by dropping a precisely oscillating field can return to >such a spot without it CHANGING on them. For we see that normal >environments CHANGE their frequencies with each passing moment, and so a >stable field would AID in returning to a precise spot on earth from some >far distant galaxy.
>
>Thats my best guess for now....
>
>Take Care [REDACTED]
>
>SDAI-Tech1
>
>PS. As to my age, I am no younger than [REDACTED] and no older than Bill >Clinton. ;-) When the time comes, I will surely tell you more about me.
>Its not you that I don't trust....Unfortunately, e-mail and computers are >subject to 'eavesdropping' ;-) Besides - mysteries make things more >exciting! Yes, this is a language of light we are developing and like the >sun it will slowly become dawn and replace the darkness with light. I >will send you some materials soon, when I get a chance - so you can see >what I am working on. In the meanwhile, I will 'see' you on the BBS!
>(Alan only knows me from my posts - he has surely seen quite a number by >now! ;-) I don't know how many hits the boards get - that is a question >for [REDACTED] perhaps...
>