Steve and [REDACTED]

We have done some preliminary research on this end and as of yet, there is no listing of Lovekin in the Washington State National Guard. Furthermore, please note the following:

1. My military researcher, [REDACTED] says he knows of no state NG where there is a Lt. Gen. (a 3-star). The Adjutant General (AG) of each NG is at most a Major General (a 2-star).
2. "Q" Clearance does NOT refer to counter-intelligence. It refers to nuclear weapon design/functioning information.
3. While it is possible that an officer could be promoted to BG at age 57, this would be a bit older than the norm.
4. [REDACTED] also spoke with a retired Marine colonel who has been in WA since 1989. He worked in the state government for several years on veterans issues. He is now still active in veterans affairs, but not in the capacity as a state employee. He never heard of Lovekin, and was fairly sure that he would have heard of him, if he was a BG in the WA NG. (My contact points out that the BG position in the state NG is a political plumb, & finds it hard to believe that the Gov. of WA would give this promotion to someone not in the state of WA.)

The fact that Lovekin said he would be willing to show you his retired military ID is of course a good thing; but it not enough for any of us to say, as documentation or proof, that "you saw his retired Military ID card as a Brigadier General." There has got to be some public record of his promotion as an officer in order to put this to rest once and for all, and so far, there isn't any.

Perhaps when Lovekin is a little more rested, you can convey to him what the problem is now, and hopefully he can then provide bona fide documentation. Please continue to keep me in the loop on this and let me know if you feel there is anything further I can do on this end. Thanks

I have spoken to [REDACTED] he was made a Brig. General in 1997 in the WASHINGTON STATE ARMY NATIONAL GUARD. His commanding officer was a Lt. Gen. Richard somebody- he was groggy and couldn't recall the last name. It was Q clearance, counter-intelligence. He will let me see his mil. ID card but will not put it out to the public. Best, [REDACTED]
