[REDACTED] agrees with me that [REDACTED] would now respond better to a call directly from you (Doc on Doc and all that).

I do know that his 17 year security oath has now expired, so there are no legal restrictions. He was the fair haired boy of one of the Company's biggest unknown movers and shakers, Margaret Bigerstaff, but all he need testify to was the fact that while working as the Doc on a Navy spy ship in the Persian Gulf in the '60s he was told where to look in the sky, and a UFO would appear there on time and on cue - which it used to do. (One wonders now whether it was an ARV).

[REDACTED] went on to be a big wheel at Montauk, and was involved in dolphin language etc.

He was also ordered to prepare supplies etc. for an Arab that got burnt in the desert by approaching too close to a landed UFO.

He doesn't need to go into the details of his CIA connections.

I do happen to know that, like many Docs in his late '50s, life is not what it used to be financially. He went through a messy divorce and has gone from being one of OC's prominent neurosurgeons to working the ER rooms. So he feels quite vulnerable about his income-earning prospects.

Anyway, his home phone no. is [REDACTED] 5 (area code may have just changed to [REDACTED]). Office backline is [REDACTED], frontline [REDACTED] 0. If you call him at home, he is usually asleep by 9pm PDT.
