

Early Morning Encounter

At 2:30 AM on July 23, 1948 the pilots of an Eastern Airlines DC-3 were flying at an altitude of 5,000 feet approximately twenty miles south west of Montgomery Alabama. Suddenly, Captain [REDACTED] noticed a bright light heading directly towards their aircraft at the same altitude. Immediately, [REDACTED] put the airliner into a hard left turn. The strange UFO then swooped down off their right wing (no more than 700 feet away), made an abrupt pull-up, and then vanished instantaneously. Both pilots reported that the unusual object was some type of structured craft, and it emitted a red/orange colored exhaust. Captain [REDACTED] described the UFO as being “torpedo shaped”, and measuring approximately 100 feet long, with two rows of brightly lit lights (similar to burning magnesium) running along the side. It had a pointed “nose”, with no apparent wings, or control surfaces, and a strange blue colored glow surrounded its exterior. At least one passenger onboard the flight also witnessed the encounter.

As an interesting historical side-note, a few days after the DC-3 was buzzed by a UFO, the Air Force published its once TOP SECRET report known as the “Estimate of the Situation”. Apparently, high level military brass in Washington D.C. felt that the reliable UFO reports by two highly experienced commercial airline pilots (and others) could no longer be ignored. Sources: NICAP, Captain Edward J. Ruppelt, U.S. Air Force Project Blue Book