paid. Remember Greer's claim of the military using nerve gas on an underground facility?

Without him i'm not sure if there would have been a study on it in the first place. He gets some credit either way.

I credit Dr. Greer with bringing me into the project. And I think he has done many good things for studies of the phenomena. The agreement ahead of time was that I would report the findings to the best of my ability. I brought in renowned experts across multiple disciplines to double check the work. It took 5 years and over a dozen people-- all cross checking each other's work. The work went through detailed anonymous review (the standard for the field). My conclusions are now widespread. If people want to conclude differently I am not going to argue with them. That said, the ball is now in their court to prove with science (not opinion) that I am wrong. I held up my end of the bargain.

agree that Dr. Greer has done a lot to move things forward. We would not know about many things if it were not for him. Or at the least, knew them when we did. Personally, my stumbling across "Unacknowledged - Documentary Film 2017 one night on Netflix is what brought me back into all this after not following it for Decades. That was the first time i heard about the consciousness aspect to everything, and put it together with what i experienced.

he's also done more damage to the credibility of the subject. Anyone remember pics of the moth or butterfly caught in a camera flash Greer claimed were aliens? Greer has no credibility. Thanks for choosing this. Come and see our work.
