Dear [REDACTED]

I must confess I feel somewhat awkward writing you, because I doubt that you ever expected to hear from anyone here at NICAP. Many times over the years, we have tried to find time to initiate correspondence with some of the witnesses in important sightings, but somehow our best intentions were always thwarted. I can remember how Major Keyhoe used to worry about this, because he felt, as I do, that communication is basic to our research.

My reason in writing now is to ask a rather special favor. As editor of our newsletter, I want to begin publishing some historical features on older sightings. The many scientific and technical people who read the newsletter have often expressed interest in follow-up articles on cases that happened years ago. This interest derives from the tendency of the popular press to emphasize recent reports that have news angles, rather than to offer information on events that date back a few years. For many of our readers, a thoughtful follow-up is at least as interesting as a news story.

In this connection, I would like to do a kind of "revisit" piece on the observation you and your men made in 1956. This has always been a fascinating case to me, and I am sure a recap report would help add to what has already been published. To prepare the article, I would like to visit with you for a brief time and review the sighting and ask a few questions. I am also most anxious to show you a painting that was done for us on your experience, and to get your comments as to its accuracy. We have never exhibited or published the painting, because without some feel for its reliability, we felt we might be doing more of a disservice than a service by making it public. You could help us greatly in this regard, and I would be pleased to bring the painting with me, if you would be willing to look it over.

I will be in New Jersey on business on the weekend of April 25-26. Anytime then would be convenient for me to come to Toms River, with the exception of Sunday afternoon. Even Friday evening, April 24, would be all right. I do not want to impose on you, but if you had even an hour or so available on that weekend, I would be most grateful if you could spare it for us.

I should hasten to say, perhaps, that we will keep your name entirely confidential if you wish. Our only interest is to obtain first-hand information on the events in question. To my knowledge, NICAP has never used your name publicly, and we will certainly honor that practice if you prefer.

As soon as I hear from you, I will finalize my plans and drop you a confirming note. Having lived in New Jersey and attended school there, I am always looking for an excuse to return, so I hope we may be able to get together. I once had the good fortune to come to Toms River to speak before the Presbyterian Church, and I will always remember that beautiful autumn day and all the friendly people who made my stay so pleasant. I daresay the town has changed a lot since I was there, because a number of years has elapsed in the interim. Perhaps not too much, though, because we still hear from Rev. D'Angelo and his wife, who were kind enough to put me up while I was there.

Thank you very much for whatever help you can give us. I look forward to hearing from you.

Sincerely, [Signature]
