

CONFERENCE CALL WITH KEVIN RANDLE

AUGUST 17, 1991

Joe Stefula: We have 15 or 20 people here with South Jersey MUFON, and what we would like you to do if possible, if you would give us an update on Roswell, what you have learned and what you have found out since the book came out.

R: That's a pretty good question there, a lot of territory.

Tom Carey : Kevin, this is Tom. I haven't told them anything.

R: laughter

T: So its all yours.

R: About Buskirk and Anderson?

T: No, they're primed for the news that you gave me this week

R: I guess the best thing to do then is to talk about he news that Gerald Anderson had taken an anthropology class from Dr. Buskirk in 1957, so the connection between Anderson and Buskirk, that is in fact the Albuquerque High School.

T: The missing link was that Anderson had described Buskirk perfectly, and Buskirk denied that he was ever there, and then we learned that he taught high school at Albuquerque High, and we were looking for the connection between Gerald Anderson and Buskirk, how he could describe him so perfectly. And we found this week that he had taken a class from Buskirk, and what was it Kevin, 1957?

R: 1957, I believe.

T: So, there's the missing link. And what does this do to Anderson, Kevin?

R: I think it pretty well buries Anderson's story completely. I don't know if you told them that he took a polygraph examination and passed it with flying colors. But the problems there is, we don't know what kind of questions were asked. Another problem is, that he has been under hypnotic regression some 13 times, and that in and of itself may negate the positive report. Don Schmitt and I were not invited to participate, and I don't know what questions were asked or how hard the questions were, and that sort of thing. So we'll have to wait and see how that goes. But our feeling, Don Schmitt and I agree, that the Anderson story is pretty much XX.

Don Johnson: Kevin, this is Don Johnson. I talked to Don Schmitt about a week ago and if Don has talked to you since then he has probably told you that I went out to Washington State and talked to Cav Cavitt.

R: He mentioned that. I've got some information on that that we got just last Friday, as a matter of fact. I talked to Cavitt on Friday. Because he'd done an interview, Don and Phil Klass had done an interview in Washington State. There were some things said about Cavitt, and he wanted me to call Cavitt. One of the things that Cavitt said, first of all I'm sure you're all familiar with John Keel's balloon bomb theory. Cavitt reinforced what we published in other places that there was no balloon bomb there, that the guys at Roswell should have recognized a Fugo balloon had it been one. And he knew of no Fugo balloons being found in that area. And of course there were none found in the State of New Mexico. That kind of shot that down. Then Cavitt told me, that what he had picked up was some kind of a balloon. He wasn't really sure, he said a radiosonde or something like that. I said, a Rawin. And he said, no, I said a radiosonde, and he said that's what it was, some kind of balloon. Now his story changed a little bit from not having even been in Roswell to actually going out on some kind of recovery. I don't know if that's what he told you, Dr. Johnson, or not.

DJ: He also told me something that he hadn't shared with you before, that he had been on a recovery for a body recovery, actually, for a crashed pilot. And Don Schmitt told me that when you had first talked to him that he had claimed he had never been out on any types of recovery. And he said, well we were picking up a hand here and a shoe there, and we said after a while, well what's the point of doing all this. So he obviously had been out on at least that recovery. He also said that the quote in your book is not entirely accurate, where it says that Cavitt claims never to have heard about a crashed disc or flying saucers at Roswell. He says, I never claimed that I never heard about flying discs, there were lots of reports of flying saucers. In fact, I was sent down to, I forget where he said, Albuquerque, to investigate one, and it turned out to be a taco that somebody had thrown across the room. He was trying to make light of the situation.

R: A tortilla

DJ: A tortilla, right, he told you that story?

R: I remember it now, what we were attempting to say in that quote was that what he had told us was that there was nothing about the crash, he'd never read about it, never heard about it. I may have misled people saying the quote was from him, but Don was right there, and he was very emphatic that he never heard anything about it. Referring very specifically to the crash at Roswell, not all flying disc or flying saucer reports, just the crash at Roswell.

DJ: Well, I think he was trying to make something of, I have to say I was talking to Don and said that the reason I hadn't called him right away was because he had me convinced that he wasn't there. I mean, that he hadn't been part of the investigation. Now he's said, well, Marcel might have recovered this and if it's true, if it did happen, then more power to him, I think it was right for him to come out and say it. But Cavitt doesn't place himself there, he gives me a lot of stories about why, he says, well Mary and he were new to the base, he didn't wear his uniform, all these types of things, he didn't go to the officers club, and he wasn't involved.

R: No, he didn't go to the officer's club because the base wasn't supposed to know what the ranks of the CIC guys were. So he didn't join the NCO club, he didn't join the officer's club, he tried to stay away from all the clubs, he did tell me that, and he did say that he never wore his uniform. He also maintained that there had never been anything about a crash, specifically, of course there were flying disc or flying saucer reports. Specifically about the crash there had never been anything. The other thing is we've got a number of witnesses at the base, it's not just Marcel's testimony, about the crash sites. In fact the testimony...

JS: Kevin, we're getting some kind of feedback here that's cutting out every other word of yours. I don't know what we can do about it. (discussion about transmission problem with speakerphone)

JS: Let me ask you this, have any new witnesses come forward since the publication of the book?

R: There's been quite a few, there's been a lot of activity about that, people coming forward since we published the book, including one of the neighbors of the Marcel's, told us that Jesse had come over the next day very excited because they had had a flying saucer over at the house. That kind of confirms part of the Marcel story from an independent witness. I need to interview her at length to get all the information, but that was one of the things that had come forward from our work after the book.

JS: From my experience doing investigations into crashes and other tragedies, the GIs are notorious for keeping souvenirs and stuff. Is there any indication that someone out there might have picked up a pocketfull of this material?

R: We know that people picked stuff up. Robert Smith, who is interviewed in the book, talked about one of the NCOs grabbing a piece and pocketing it and showing it to other GIs at the base. Pappy Henderson apparently had a piece of the wreckage that he showed to a number of people. We are unable to trace of the stuff at this time. Yeah, there are stories that people have pocketed souvenirs and might have got away with it, but we've had no luck in getting names of the people or finding any of that material.

Vince Ellis: I have a couple of questions regarding your book and what's happened recently. Could you explain the latest article in FOCUS with regard to General DuBose's latest statements to Moore and Shandera about the flight on the 6th never taking place, and so forth?

R: We have DuBose on video tape telling us the things that we XX. I think that what you're going to find is that there is going to be a magazine article by a disinterested third party coming out that's going to explain that a little more fully and I don't want to steal his thunder. But the point is, and I hate to cast aspersions, but it looks as if Moore and Shandera have coaxed the answers they wanted out of DuBose. I think you're going to find that that's the way it is. I'm sure you've read our article in the MUFON Journal, and the thing that Shandera had written. And Shandera comes back in his letter saying the same things over and over again. I think that what you'll find is that Don and my version of the events is the accurate version. Shandera of course had the cute ploy of not letting the other researchers research and acknowledge it, and you'll see in the letter that Jaime Shandera wrote that he had actually done that to Don and me because they took the picture of Bond Johnson and information from that didn't credit us for finding the photographs. Moore and Shandera even got the time frame wrong, they didn't even verify the photograph that they got indirectly from us. They got it from Bond Johnson, is where it came from.

VE: Yeah, I have a hard time understanding why Moore and Shandera when they challenge you and Don are so charged with emotion, they use so much verbal trickery it seems, it goes beyond presenting just their side of the story.

R: I think the question is, you have to read our version of what we said General DuBose said, you have to read their version of what he said, but you also have to remember we supplied video tapes XX. What we had said was, our representations of the documentation on our side, and I think that what happened too often, way too often, is that XX they attack the credibility and honor of the people writing the articles, and that is not what we should be doing to each other.

VE: There are a couple of areas in the book that I wanted to touch base with you on. One is I have a problem with the way Barnett and the others were so easily dismissed from the crash site when Mac Brazel was grilled for a one week period. I know information is kind of scanty on that area of the investigation, but what's your read on that?

R: My problem of course is the Barnett information is all second hand. Barnett passed away in 1969, so everything we have on the Barnett end of the story is all second hand. And we would be willing to dismiss the Barnett story as some kind of an erratic that has no relevance to this with the exception of one thing that was said to us by Harold Bacha (sp?) which was Barnett's neighbor, and that was simply that Barney believed that his throat cancer came about because he had been bending over one of the bodies. and he had inhaled the germs from the body possibly and that was why he had throat cancer. We believe the throat cancer really was from his being gassed during World War I. You know, that's sort of irrelevant, one way or another. The point to me is I don't think Barney Barnett would be telling neighbors he thought his throat cancer from a crashed flying saucer if he hadn't been a participant in that event. So we think that Barnett was there. But I think the other thing was Barnett and the archeologists, if they were in fact archeologists, they may have been geologists, that they came across the crash site and then there were only a few moments before the military got there. I think what the military did was round them all up and obviously put the fear of God into them, and got them out of there before they could see anything else. Brazel, because he was the owner of the ranch and he had walked the field, his story was a little bit more important than a bunch of people who stumbled on the site. I think that XX they got them XX they believed XX got them convinced that there would be dire consequences they got them out of there as quickly as possible. I think one of the things we have to remember is Mary Ann Gardner talks about the cancer patient dying, very upset, she told Mary Ann Gardner the story a number of times. She did not, by the way, confirm the Plains of San Augustin. But she was very concerned about the government her XX dying of cancer. I think that's what XX is. The government was able to put the fear of God into these people, and got them out as quickly as possible.

VE: Another question I have about the bodies portion of the book is, there's not a lot of information about how the craft was removed.

R: And you're absolutely correct, and that's a question that Don and I had not pursued to this point of what happened to the craft. We were more concerned with what happened to the bodies. Getting the bodies out of there. And we went back asking the question what happened to the craft. At the impact site it was pretty intact.

VE: Because a lot of the key discussions, whenever the subject of crashed discs has come up, is how do they move this thing across country or whatever.

R: As we understand, this one was about 35 or 40 feet in diameter but its very light weight. What we have been told, and again this is what we have been told, we have not been able to verify this, we're still looking for verification of this, but there was a story that we heard recently that there was something brought on to the base under a tarp. And so it was housed on the base. Depending on the XX they may have rigged it on a flat bed truck and put something around it to give it an odd looking shape. We've also been told that they travelled only at night, and pulled up at various Air Force bases during the day. Travelled, say, from Roswell to, I don't know if Cannon AFB was there in 1947 or not, Cannon is up near Clovis, NM, but it would be very easy to travel from Roswell to Cannon, to stop for the night, then down to Wichita Falls, Texas, which is XX AFB, and stop for the night, and work their way up, driving during the dark hours when you wouldn't have a lot of traffic, and just sort of hopping from base to base until you got to Wright Field. There's another thing that's come up since the book. We have been told, and I haven't been able to verify this, but one of the saucers, what they had done was they buried it at the land fill at Wright Field, covered it with garbage, in essence, until they could get a structure built to house it. We haven't been able to confirm that, I must stress that, we haven't been able to confirm that, but that's one of the stories that we've heard.

VE: Another question I have for you is, what's the reference for Mac Brazel being flown over the crash site, or asked at least to point it out from the air?
I wasn't sure how you found out about that?

R: Loretta Proctor, for one, told us that Mac had been flown back to the ranch. And some of the other information that we've had suggested that Brazel had seen the bodies, and the only place that he could see the bodies was probably from an aircraft. He flew over. So we think that Brazel and Pappy Henderson were involved on the same aircraft. We've been told by a number of the neighbors that Mac Brazel had been flown back to the ranch in that time frame. We're fairly confident that that's what happened.

VE: OK, I have one final question for you. Was Rickett in on the bodies? Was Rickett ever given knowledge of the recovery of the bodies?

R: We believe Rickett has knowledge of the bodies. Rickett just doesn't want to talk about that. Have I adequately answered the other questions?

VE: Yeah, basically I understand how you narratively covered the areas that you didn't have a lot of information on, and I was just getting clarification to make sure. You just reinforced what I thought, that you were still working on certain areas and that's why they were presented the way they were.

R: We've heard some stories as well, but we haven't been able to get clarification or confirmation of them, so we've kind of left those stories out of the book as well. XX

JS: Well, if anybody else has any questions

DJ: Kevin, this is Don Johnson again. I just wanted to tell you that one of the reasons my interview went so smoothly with Mary and Cav Cavitt was that they really like you. They talked about, Oh Kevin, yeah, we talked to him a couple of times, we gave him these names, and we really like Kevin. So, you made a good impression on them.

R: That's very nice to hear, especially since the letter from Phil Klass talking about our frayed relationship with the Cavitt's. That's one thing else that Phil Klass has made up that we have some kind of a strained relationship. I talked to Cavitt on the phone a week ago last Friday, he was very friendly, and we had a, it was just joking around, but it was just so he understood that we hadn't been using his name or releasing his name other than the XX in the book. So he was very pleased with that.

DJ: Yeah, he mentioned that. He appreciated that phone call you gave him after that Senator's aide called him, I guess Stan Friedman sicked him on him.

R: Yeah, that's exactly right. We're concerned that Friedman, with his ham handed investigative techniques, would lose us a very valuable witness, but I wanted Cavitt to know that we had nothing to do with that. We certainly wouldn't have done anything like that without letting him know. But it turns out it really wasn't the Senator that had called Cavitt, but in fact a congressional aide for a different Senator. D'Amato, so, it really wasn't even the Senator that had called him.

DJ: Do you think Mary Cavitt knows about the crash, or do you think that Cav Cavitt hasn't told her?

R: I would suspect that he hasn't told her everything that he knows. He may have told her a little bit about this, but I know that in the security work often times the husband won't tell the wife exactly what he knows. That may be some of that operating there. Now, on the other side of the coin, I think Rickett has shared an awful lot of the information with his wife. She probably knows a lot more.

But I don't think, I think Cavitt is close mouthed enough that he has not told her very much of anything at all. Mac Brazel, for example, he wasn't even an intelligence agent, but he actually refused to answer his son's questions at the time, saying that he was better off not knowing what had happened out there. So I think that there may be some of that as well. So I don't think that Mary Cavitt knows a lot, but there is a story that they were in the Marcel house a few days after this event took place and here's something that we learned after the publication of the book, that there was a piece, that they still had a piece of metal.

DJ: Right, that's what Mary Cavitt told me. She said, you know, there was this funny looking piece of something in the Marcel's kitchen.

R: And they tried to cut it and stuff

DJ: Oh really? I hadn't heard that part. She just said there was something in Marcel's kitchen. And then Cav Cavitt agreed, he sort of nodded. You know, he's pretty close lipped, she was the one that volunteered that information.

R: We couldn't even get him to joke about the bodies. And as I said, the first time we talked to him he denied that there had even been anything in the newspapers. I think what he said was there was nothing in the newspapers about it. What we were referring to, particularly in the book, was the crash at Roswell, there was nothing in the news about the crash at Roswell, we know that's not true, I mean everybody's seen the headline about AAF captures flying saucer. We wondered if Cavitt wasn't purposely lying, telling us there was nothing in the newspapers, such an outrageous lie that we would know that what he was telling us was not the whole truth. But we suspect that might be part of the reason he XX. Yeah, we talked about the flying discs and flying saucers, but maybe the point's not clear enough in the book exactly what he said, but what we meant there was simply that there was nothing in the news about the crash at Roswell.

DJ: Well, I told Don Schmitt that I played him the Recollections of Roswell tape in order to buy some more time and he watched the tape, and when Rickett gets to the part where he says, well by that time Cavitt was in charge of everything, was in charge of the recovery. He stops the tape. And he says, looks over, stops the tape, frowns, you know, gets a frowning expression on his face. Looks over at Mary and says, what did Rickett say? And Mary says, he said that you were in charge of it at that point. Silence, doesn't say anything. Just starts the tape again.

R: We had him on the ropes in a similar circumstance when we interviewed him. We were talking about we had witnesses that identified him on the debris fields specifically. He got very nervous at that point. He leaned forward, he picked up a magazine, he threw it down, he looked at me and he said, Bill Rickett tell you that? And, we were trying to protect Rickett at that time because we didn't want Cavitt to call Rickett, XX him, so we said no, it was somebody else who told us that. That was the only time that we had him very, very nervous in the interview, was when we were talking to him about having witnesses at the crash site. That was the only point he was really nervous, and we let him off the hook. I was kind of sorry we did that afterwards, we should have kept pressing on that point. But its sort of the same kind of thing you're talking about.

DJ: The other thing is that further on in the tape we were, I think it was Robert Shirkey (sp?) that was saying, well I saw that I beam they carried down the hall, and Blanchard stepped into my office and I couldn't see, so I said to him, Colonel turn sideways, I want to see too. And maybe if I hadn't said that I wouldn't have been transferred out of there a week later. And when he heard that he started chuckling. Cavitt just thought that was funny. He gave me a name, and he felt it was pretty important we try to remember this name, of the Provost Marshall that Blanchard didn't like, he wasn't sure if this Provost Marshall was there at the time or it came shortly afterward. His name was Robert T. Dardan.

R: Dardan wasn't there. The Provost Marshall in July of 47 was Edwin Easley (sp?)

DJ: He said that Dardan came later. And Blanchard didn't like him very much and I guess he got him canned eventually. But he told me a story, I asked him what his opinion of Blanchard was. And he said, well the man was a rake, but I don't hold that against anybody. You know, they have their own morals. But apparently Dardan was the Provost Marshall and Ramey and Blanchard were out and he said they tried to bring some floozies on to the base. They wouldn't let them on to the base with the women. And Blanchard got really upset, and said, "I own this base!" But apparently they wouldn't let them do it and they didn't get along after that point. So the guy was something of a prude.

R: But the documentable evidence showed that Edwin Easley was Provost Marshall in July of 47. Dardan came in somewhat after Easley. Easley is the important one there.

JS: Kevin, this is Joe Stefula again, let me ask you a question. Are there still witnesses that are invoking secrecy oaths or secrecy pledges as the reason why they don't want to come forward and talk?

R: Absolutely. There are a number that said they've been sworn to secrecy and they don't want to talk about it. I'm not sure if we mentioned it in the book or not, but Edward Skelly (sp?) who was the Operations Officer XX who flew the bodies out of Fort Worth, or out of Roswell, when Don called him to talk to him, his wife kept saying, are you with the Air Force? And once Don got to Skelly he just wouldn't talk about it at all, but we know that Skelly was the Operations Officer involved in that. That's the attitude they're still invoking. His attitude is he wasn't there, he knows nothing about it. We know he was there. Others are telling us, "I can't talk because I was sworn to secrecy."

JS: Has there been any consideration of approaching the Department of Defense or other agency, White House, or someone higher with a request to grant these people permission to talk?

R: Yes, we're working on that. In fact, just this morning I got a call. And we're working on getting Congressman XX Congressional representative from XX

(laughter from assembled crowd, due to garble in telephone transmission at this "strategic" point in the conversation.)

JS: Could you repeat the last sentence?

R: We've approached Congressman Skeen (sp?) who is the Roswell representative, who is looking into that sort of thing as well.

JS: Let me ask you this question. I heard a rumor that you guys had approached or at least had briefed somebody in the Oval Office about your book?

R: (laughing) Hey, that's great!

JS: Somebody with a bird for a last name? Have you had any communication with anybody in the White House?

R: Yes we do. Indirectly we have communications with somebody in the White House, and the book has been placed in the hands of the President, yes. It is correct.

JS: Do you have any feedback yet from the Oval Office?

R: No, nothing whatsoever, and I'm not sure if President Bush is even going to take it seriously, but we made sure that a copy of the book got into his hands.

DJ: Kevin, there was a rumor going around at the MUFON conference, and I think Phil Klass was spreading it, I can't prove that, but that it was the Vice President, Dan Quayle, who was a real gunq-ho UFO nut, believer, and that's the reason why there's any interest at all in the White House. As I said, I think Klass was alluding to this, creating this innuendo about Dan Quayle. Have you heard any of this stuff?

R: No, uh huh. I'm not sure that the Vice President, especially someone of Quayle's stature, or lack thereof, would be included in this, on this, this has got to be very highly classified, and I'm just not convinced that Dan Quayle knows anything about it.

DJ: The thing that Klass was saying is that there is interest on Quayle's part.

R: That could well be, that could well be, but we've had no communication with (tape ends here)

(tape resumes, approximately 15 seconds of discussion missing)

JS: XX the reason the government would not release these people from their pledges to openly talk to researchers.

R: That's absolutely correct, and we're attempting to do exactly that, but we've XX been sworn to secrecy, approach his congressional representative, and ask for permission to speak freely on this topic, so the congressman can go to the appropriate agency, the Department of the Army, the Department of the Air Force, or in fact the Department of Defense to get the help with this. And we are making attempts to find a number of those people from several congressional districts with responses to that.

JS: Do you think you might be successful?

R: I think no matter what happens its going to be in our favor. They're either going to say, yeah, you can go ahead and talk, and then they'll tell us everything they know, or they'll say no, you can't talk, and then the question is what is still secret after 45 years? No matter what they do, we're in good shape.

JS: Have you come across any evidence that Defense Intelligence Agency is conducting any type of look at the UFO phenomena?

R: No, but that doesn't mean that it isn't. I think what's happened is that the agency created to overlook the recovery at Roswell, and I'm sure you're all aware that neither Don nor I believe the MJ-12 document to be authentic, we don't think there was a Majestic 12, but we know there was an oversight committee. We've talked to people XX the oversight committee, but the name of it is really irrelevant. The point is, what you have is a very highly classified organization that is dealing with these phenomena at one level and not telling anybody what's going on. That's not to say that some other organization at a much lower level, such as DIA, might form their own working groups like Blum talked about. But they would not have the knowledge, nor would they have the capability of cracking the higher level, investigation of the higher level cover story. There may be some type of interest at lower levels in the government, but its not something that has anything to do with Roswell XX

JS: Do you think its possible for an organization to be that secret that it would stay basically secret for 40 some years without word leaking out some way?

R: The word has leaked out. But the story, as we keep saying, is so fantastic that nobody would believe it. And that's the thing that is working for them more than anything else, is when we talk about a flying saucer crash at Roswell New Mexico its such a fantastic story nobody wants to believe it. So though word has leaked in the past, people have ignored it. Like, Dorothy Kilgallen did a, I'm sure you're all aware, did a column about that at one point where obviously some word had leaked into higher reaches of the British government. So the word has gotten out a couple of times but nobody can get any farther than that.

? Kevin, doesn't General Exon allude to that type of a group as well?

R: General Exon talks about the "unholy 13," absolutely. And that was the oversight committee developed by the President after the find at Roswell, and we've been able to come up with the names of several of the people on the committee, such as Carl Spaatz, who XX Army Air Forces at the time, Dwight Eisenhower, Stuart Symington, the Undersecretary of War for Air, so we've got a number of names of people who XX on the committee, on the MJ-12 committee.

DJ: I'm sorry, what did you just say, we missed it? They don't match the MJ-12 committee at all?

R: Well, some of them do match, some of them do match. We've come up with Vanover Bush, as a member of the oversight committee, and that matches MJ-12. But Vandenburg at the time, was neither the director of the CIA nor the Air Force. So, it doesn't make sense that he was the primary member on the committee, especially when we were told that Carl Spaatz, who was Vandenburg's boss, was a member of the committee. Now, Hoyt Vandenburg may have been a secondary member, but he wasn't a primary member, because that was Carl Spaatz.

DJ: Didn't Vandenburg quash a lot of UFO investigations later on? A lot of the stuff that's filtered up from the mid level of intelligence stuff to Vandenburg, and he just didn't believe any of that stuff. That was the old version of that story prior to Roswell.

R: I'm not sure that it was him not believing the story, but it was him having inside knowledge and attempting to squash the story.

VE: Kevin, could you tell me how General Exon came out, came forward, or how he was located?

R: In the course of the investigation, we'd come across his name as being one of the people who knew some information about this, so we approached him to talk to him a while ago. And he gave us some information about the Unholy Thirteen and other things. He told us about four, I think, F-89 fighter planes that disappeared over the continental United States chasing these. The planes just flat vanished, nobody ever found them. And that had the oversight committee and the Pentagon very upset, and that was how Exon learned about them, and was involved in some of that activity. We found Exon through our investigation talking to other people XX Arthur Exon we'd been able to confirm who the committee was. I'd talked to him at one point right at Wright Patterson Air Force Base. We went to lunch at the Officer's Club in July of last year. So he's exactly who he says he is. We found him through our investigations and talking to other people.

JS: When was that, Kevin, the F-89 disappearance?

R: The only thing he could tell us about the F-89s was that he thought it was around 1955 or 56 and it was in Tennessee or Kentucky. He really couldn't remember all the details. Now I've gone back through the New York Times index of aircraft accidents looking for disappearances of aircraft, I haven't been able to find any. That simply means I haven't been able to find it yet, so we're still working on that lead.

JS: He's talking about four aircraft, total of, those were two man crews in those Scorpions.

R: We're talking about four aircraft flat disappearing, and they never found any wreckage over the Continental United States. It's not like the Kinrock case where the guys could have XX into the lake intact, and the airplane is sitting on the bottom of the lake. We're talking about four aircraft in a formation disappearing over the continental United States. We're still searching for some references to XX on it.

DJ: George Filer has a question. This is Major George Filer, he's retired now, our Assistant State Director.

GF: I was wondering if there is any indication that UFOs are still at Wright Pat, and if there's a way to go through that system to reveal the information?

R: As you probably know, Freedom of Information Act doesn't do us any good, because it always comes down to national security, so they don't give us all we want. But the last information we had was that XX at Wright Patterson Air Force Base as late as 1986, that's the last information we have. And we have some other information that suggests one of them or two of them or some of them might have ended up at MacDill Air Force Base, because that has a large Aerospace Medicine Facility. Also, we were told that some of the bodies may have gone to Lowry because in 1947 that was the headquarters of the XX..XX sent one of the bodies there to see the best way to preserve the others.

DJ: Did you say 1986 for the R: 1986 is the last date that we have for the bodies being at Wright Patterson. We XX up to 1986 they were there. Doesn't mean they've been moved, it means our information ends at that point.

DJ: I have a friend who lives in Dayton, and he said that when the Hangar 18 stuff came out in the 70's, it was treated as a joke, and people would come on to the Base, you know they have regular civilian tours. And he said, the local people would put up big signs that say Hangar 18, over the John, or Hangar 18 here, Hangar 18 there. So you're saying that even when all this malarkey was going on, that there was still a possibility that there really was some stuff still there?

R: I think so. I think things like Hangar 18, although its inadvertent, does more to undermine the credibility of what we're saying than anything else. People are saying well, at Wright Patterson Air Force Base there was a Hangar 18, never figuring out that the Hangar 18 that they are referring to is on a base in Texas, not at Wright Patterson Air Force Base. And I think in fact there is a Hangar 18 at Wright Patterson, but I think its a regular aircraft hangar. XX other classified areas, of course, on Wright Patterson, as there are on any military bases. Access to it is extremely limited, and that's probably where they are, in one of those facilities where there's a very limited access to it.

GF: I've been told there's a large underground area there.

DJ: George Hansen has a question for you.

GH: Earlier in our conversation you mentioned a Senatorial aide. Do you have the name of that person?

R: Senatorial aide? His name was D'Amato. Not to be confused with the New York Congressman named D'Amato. And I forget the Senator's office he was working out of, I don't know if it was Jesse Helm's office or one of the Senator's from Georgia, on the Armed Services Committee, I forget what his name is DJ: Sam Nunn?

R: He's been working with a couple of people like that. So the D'Amato that called Cavitt was not the New York Congressman, but was in fact an aide to the other Senator. I just for the life of me can't remember the name of the guy.

JS: Bob Oeschler indicated that there was somebody on the staff of the joint Senate-House Intelligence Committee that was looking into this, based on Blum's allegation in his book that 25 million dollars was being expended for the government to do UFO research. Have you heard anything about this?

R: I think there's probably a number of Congressmen based on what's come out lately who are kind of quietly making inquiries, but there's nothing going on that, at this point what we need to do is force some kind of congressional investigation with high powered congress men and women on it, otherwise we're going to be talking about this 50 years from now, is it true or is it not true. Don and I are convinced that it is absolutely true, that we captured a flying saucer in 1947, and that explains the whole history of the UFO phenomenon from that time on and the government role, because it no longer had to investigate what was going on XX.

JS: You know, Phil Klass' best argument that he presents is, let's assume Roswell was true. He says, where is the massive defense effort by the Department of Defense to counteract, because they would have to assume that any craft or beings would be hostile, and to prove differently. He says, there's no evidence that you can document where the Department of Defense did a massive defensive effort to counter this.

R: But isn't that, that's Phil Klass' argument, and if the beginning part his statement is faulty, then the end part doesn't follow logically. I think the facts of the matter are that there is some kind of an effort to exploit the materials that were found at Roswell. XX a number of the scientists who were involved in that, XX

(telephone connection momentarily disrupted)

JS: Basically, he cites as an example that when the Department of Defense knew there was a Soviet A-Bomb, and that the Soviets were building copies of the B-29, they called in industry and said, hey, this is a threat, what do you need, what can you guys do for us? And industry came back with the DEW line, the Texas Towers off the coast, surface to air missiles, and stuff like that to counter the Soviet threat. But he says, there is no evidence where you have a threat from outside this earth that the Department of Defense took any action to counter.

R: Well, first of all, he's made a couple of false assumptions there. The difference simply is, the fact that the Soviets had an A-bomb and that kind of a threat, is not something as highly classified as the find at Roswell. We know that there was an attempt to exploit the find at Roswell, but they did not want to alert everybody to what's going on, specifically because if you start talking about this sort of thing and what's going on there's going to be leaks to the press. But more importantly, there's going to be leaks into the Soviet Union. That's what they were attempting to avoid here. So, Phil Klass saying that when we discovered there was a Soviet threat, although he tells me it was when the Soviets, he used that argument for me, he said it was when the Soviets had launched the first Sputnik, and then there was this big massive defense effort to change the course of history because of that. But I think the point here is we've got a case where we've got some material that is extremely highly classified, and you're not going to go willy nilly into the industrial arena with this information because it is going to leak to the Soviets and XX what the real problem was. Despite the fact that according to Rickett, even a year after the metal had been recovered from Roswell, they still hadn't been able to cut it. So they've got their own scientists working at Wright Patterson Air Force Base, and including Werner von Braun, Robert Oppenheimer, Vanover Bush and John von Neumann, high level scientists who were involved in the activity, but they're playing it close to the vest as well, trying to exploit the find. And the other argument is that they have to assume that it's hostile. The answer to that is they didn't have to assume it's hostile, because there's absolutely no evidence that what was going on was hostile in intent. And after 44 years I think that assumption has been borne out. Obviously there is nothing that is overtly hostile about this phenomena.

JS: If Roswell is true, does that lend credence to Lazar's claim that replication of vehicles and things like that out at Groom Lake?

R: It makes belief in Lazar's theories much easier, because we've already established that interstellar travel is possible. So that means that Lazar's information could be authentic. It makes it easier to accept it. But I don't personally believe Lazar's information is wholly accurate.

VE: Is what, is completely accurate?

R: Not wholly accurate, its not completely accurate

JS: Do you believe that Roswell was a one time occurrence?

R: We have evidence, fairly good evidence, that we're continuing to explore, that there were at least four in the United States. And that doesn't count Ubatuba (sp?), which also suggests another crash, and it doesn't count anything in the Soviet Union. The assumption XX four crashes.

JS: Kevin, what other four?

DJ: Kingman, Arizona is one, isn't it?

R: Kingman is one, Las Vegas is two, Del Rio is three, and Kecksburg is four. There's documentation for all of those. It doesn't mean all were extraterrestrial in origin. In fact, with Kecksburg there is a very distinct possibility that what it was was some kind of a nuclear powered satellite launched from this country, and that is why the military responded the way it did. XX the evidence XX nuclear powered XX away from the population. Those are the four that we've got information for, plus Ubatuba in 1957. And then the question is, did the Soviet Union have a like number? And the answer is, that they probably would, so they probably know as much about it as we do.

JS: Any indication why it only occurs in the United States or the Soviet Union, not down in Spain or Portugal or somewhere else?

R: How about Ubatuba, in Brazil, in 1957, there's South America right there. I think the reason you have the initial flurry around the United States and Mexico is specifically because the first place we ever dropped an atomic bomb was New Mexico. A lot of the atomic research was going on in New Mexico, rockets were being fired from the White Sands proving grounds. That may account for the XX by them XX going on in New Mexico. XX that there are evidence, I've just cited the XX confident of, but there are other cases, a bunch of them in the books from all over the world, especially a lot in South America.

JS: Does anyone else have any questions here?

Richard Butler: I have one. Has anyone approached Admiral Inman about any of this?

R: Not to my knowledge, no. But he may not have been on the inside track to know, either. But if somebody could do so, and get some kind of a conclusive answer from him, that would be nice. We have not approached him at all.

RB: How any naval official's names come up in any of your investigations on this?

R: No, they haven't. Which may or may not be significant. We've concentrated specifically on Roswell, so naturally we're concentrating on the Army Air Forces and Army. That's not to say there wasn't some sort of naval involvement at some point, but at this point we're not aware of anything.

TC: Kevin, this is Tom

R: Yes, Tom

TC: You're off to New Mexico at some point in the near future?

R: Yes, we are

TC: Do you care to relate your itinerary?

R: We haven't got it set yet. What we want to do is spend some time in Albuquerque, we want to go past the Magdalena crash site as identified by Gerald Anderson XX there are questions we want to ask people for that specific area, we're going to try to get down to talk to a couple of new witnesses XX left out of the Corona area, and Capitan and Rezoso (sp?), we're going to get over to Roswell for a couple of days. But we don't have anything officially worked out.

??: How about Cactus Jack? Is he a dead issue?

R: We're still trying to determine where Cactus Jack may be. Don is making some inquiries, and I really needed to call Peggy Sparks and talk to her again about some of this.

VE: Kevin, is there anything new on the base nurse that Glen Dennis knew, did she work at the base, and are you guys trying to find her?

R: There's really nothing new on that. But we're still working to track her down. Had a couple of leads there that we're following up, but once again, lot's of leads don't pan out. We've gone down a lot of paths that have just dead ended on us. So we're still continuing to look in those directions, and there's some things we're trying. At this point we haven't been able to VE: But that doesn't mean you don't believe the testimony of Glen Dennis, or does it?

R: No, it doesn't at all. We believe Glen Dennis, we think he's telling the truth as best he knows it, and everything that he's told us that we can verify has proven out. XX he was in Ballard Funeral home in Roswell, and they did run the ambulance service, and things like that. So the mundane things he's told us we've been able to verify. And helped to add to his credibility, not to mention the fact that what he was saying hadn't come out until, he mentioned it to his folks early on, and that sort of thing, but he hadn't told it to a lot of different people. One of the things that's very interesting is that he was talking about how the Sheriff, George Wilcox, who according to the book, Wilcox wasn't interested. XX found out exactly how interested the Sheriff was. The Sheriff went out and visited Glen Dennis' family and told them that Glen had got himself into a lot of trouble. So we've been able to verify some things Glen Dennis said, so I think what happened, I think the nurse was apparently in the military for probably about three years. XX very easy xx get rid of her records, especially if they had made a deal with her. And I think that may be what happened. XX the convent, she'd talked about becoming a nun, xx enter a convent and never talk about this, the Army would xx from her service, and go on her merry way. I think that may be what happened. She entered a convent and the Catholic Church protected her from that point on.

?: Do you have an article coming out in what magazine, California UFO?

R: California UFO Magazine specifically dealing with Glen Dennis, yeah. Not Glen Dennis, XX Gerald Anderson, dealing specifically with Gerald Anderson.

JS: Do you think Gerald Anderson is a complete fake, or he might be embellishing a family rumor or a family history?

R: Tom is the one that presented the theory that it may have been a family rumor. And I think that the best case we can hope for for Anderson is that he, that his father heard something so they had the rumors going through the family, so he just ran with it. I don't think Gerald Anderson was on the crash site. A lot of the things that he told us about it have changed. Tom (Carey) is as cognizant of this as I am. Like, one of the things that he told me when I talked to him the first time is that they had gentle milky blue eyes, and now he's saying that they have black eyes. He said that one of them was injured, now he's saying two of them were dead, one was dying and one was uninjured. There's a lot of things that he told me in the original interview, which I have on tape, is not what he's saying now. XX in search of Mount Agate (sp?) we went to the trouble to discover there was no Mount Agate available in that region, it XX in Agate. I understand he's now saying xx Agate.

JS: Kevin, have you heard a rumor that there was an engineer brought in, a bulldozer operator, from White Sands Missile Range, up to bury this disc that was recovered on the Plains of San Augustine? Have you heard anything about this guy?

R: There was a heavy equipment operator who died under mysterious circumstances who had been involved in some of this stuff, supposedly, but he died some 13, 14 years later in 1961, it wasn't like they killed him right away. Got ran over by his bulldozer or his tractor vehicle. But what we have heard, a number of times, was that they couldn't remove the craft, so they buried it, and got it later. But We've been unable to confirm any of that sort of thing.

JS: Have you heard about this guy taking an artifact from the craft and keeping it in his house? We've heard there's a number of people who have done that, got artifacts. There's talk about a fellow named Danny Richards, I believe, who supposedly was involved, had some caves that he XX in out in that area. And he supposedly had some of the debris hidden in one of the caves.

JS: I had heard that this bulldozer operator had an artifact that he kept on his coffee table, that supposedly if you ran your hand, it looked almost like a keyboard shape, and as you ran your hand across the top of it, it would change to different colors. And supposedly when he died, his widow got rid of everything and threw it in the dump. Have you heard anything about that?

R: No, I haven't heard anything about that at all. That's a new one for me. Pappy Henderson supposedly had a piece of the debris, but we kind of looked for it a little bit and haven't been able to locate it. He showed it to a number of other people. At one point Pappy Henderson XX

VE: Kevin, future articles, primarily in IUR ?

R: We're trying to spread it out, because simply we feel its good advertising for our book, for one thing, but we try to spread things out in various publications. Unfortunately, UFO Universe doesn't have the greatest reputation in the field

DJ: Don't put anything in there (laughter) Listen, this is Don Johnson again. How are the book sales going, because we have been pretty disturbed here that B. Dalton and Walden Books do not carry it. They say they can order it for you, but all of us have walked into stores and said, are you stocking this book, and they've said, no.

R: The thing is, we're actually into our fifth printing at this point. The book is selling out of the book stores very, very quickly. We have reports from all over the country, even where Don and I haven't gone in to try to promote the book, we have reports that they can't keep it on the shelves, it sells out too quickly. Our suggestion everybody, if you go into the store and special order i in, but I've seen it in all the B. Dalton's I've been into around the Midwest, and if they didn't have it I've asked them about it and they said, yes, they ordered it. Don and I have been into a number of bookstores where they don't even have to look it up, they know exactly what the status of the book is.

DJ: Oh, really, good. What's the fifth printing, how many does that mean?

R: We're not sure, its upwards of 150,000.

VE: Kevin, do you know why Avon slapped on the same photo that they put on the Fry book?

R: They did, please remember they did not consult Don and me. Their attitude is, to sell a UFO book you have to have a picture of a UFO on the front of it. Had they asked Don or me for a color photo of a UFO, we'd have given them one of the better photos, one of the one's that XX computer enhancement techniques and is authentic. They selected that because I think what had happened is they had bought the rights to Dan Fry's photograph. So they had that one on hand and it didn't cost them any money to use it. In fact, that's the only thing I can think of. When we saw the cover, both Don and I were extremely upset. I called John Douglas, and asked him why he had done that, and his answer was, we gotta have a picture of a UFO on the cover of a UFO book, or it won't sell, which is their opinion, and I don't think its necessarily true, but its their opinion. And that its a color photograph. And he also said that. I said, well why didn't you ask us, you XX, he said well, we just didn't think about that, we should have asked you. I said, absolutely, we've got to defend the, well we don't have to defend it but we have to explain to a lot of people why there's a fake photograph on the front of our book.

TC: Kevin, you mentioned something about a recent passenger flight where the captain mentioned something about the crash site?

R: Oh, yeah. It was just a friend of mine from Milwaukee that had been flying to LA, and they were flying over New Mexico as part of the routing, and the captain came on the PA and said that they were about 100 miles north of the site where the flying saucer had crashed in 1947, and XX about it.

(laughter)

DJ: And everybody rushed to the left side of the airplane!

R: The airplane spiraled in. No,

JS: Kevin, are you convinced there was only one crashed disc?

R: Yes. All the evidence we have suggests that the Roswell event was an event by itself in that time frame. We have found nothing to suggest that there was a second crash site at Magdalena. All the first hand witnesses we have been able to talk to who were on, who we can prove were at Magdalena in 1947 deny almost universally that they were involved in anything and I think Tom can address this question as well, because he helped with that investigation XX. But we just cannot find anything to suggest that there was a second crash at Magdalena, or on the Plains of San Augustine south of Magdalena.

JS: But you're talking about two different debris fields, though, with one incident with two different debris fields?

R: The debris found on the Brazel ranch, which induced Mac Brazel to go into the Roswell Sheriff's office, then during the aerial reconnaissance two days later they found the rest of the craft about three miles away from the debris fields. That's what we call the impact site. There is actually a third site. Sheriff Wilcox had sent two deputies out on Sunday to see if they could locate the crash site, and they found a burned area. There was an area of sand that had been melted into a glass like substance, and there supposedly was a little bit of debris found there, some of the metallic debris. And that's about five miles northwest of the debris field. So, we think everything happened right on the Brazel ranch. There's no question that there were bodies found on the Brazel ranch, and those were taken to Roswell. We have not found a single first hand witness at Magdalena, other than Gerald Anderson.

JS: Let me ask you this. As being an investigator for the military for 22 years, one thing we always taught, you don't move anything until you photograph it, and place it or document it or do a drawing of it. Was it unprofessional that they just went out and loaded this stuff up and brought it back without doing a documentation of the location and of the debris?

R: I think that Marcel and Cavitt picked up some of the debris to bring back so they would know what they had, but our is that on July 8th they did exactly what you said they should be doing, documenting everything. And especially when they got to the impact site, where they found the bodies and everything. I would suspect that they photographed that. We know that there was a special photographic team that was brought in from Washington, D.C. to take care of that. I think that, from what we understand of the testimony of Marcel, it was that they went out to the debris field on the morning of the 7th, kind of walked around to get an idea of what it was. We don't know what kind of notes or documentation Jesse Marcel did at that time frame, but there was obviously enough debris that he felt he could take some of it away, and he may have documented exactly where that debris may have come from that they loaded up. We just don't have any of those documents on hand.

RB: Have you heard any rumors that any debris or part of the ship was taken to an airbase in Washington, D.C.?

R: Yes. The debris went to Washington, D.C., there is no question about it.

RB: I know someone who has a friend who was a guard back in the fifties, who was stationed, we're trying to find out if it was Bolling or Andrews. But he reportedly guarded a building where he said that there was pieces of a UFO inside the building, in Washington, D.C.

R: We know the debris went to Washington, D.C. The July 6th flight, for example, that General DuBose talks about, with Allan D. Clark, that first debris went to Washington, D.C. Now, we assume that it then went on to Wright Field from there. We don't know that for a fact. We also know that on July 8th a special flight in from Washington brought in a special investigative team, and that Rickett hand receipted some debris to a flight that went out from Roswell to Washington on the 8th. So we know debris went to Washington, we also know debris went to Los Alamos, and Debris went to Wright Field. We know that for a fact.

DJ: Would you say that your best guess is that the lion's share went to Los Alamos?

(tape ends)

R: ...the airplane. There was at least one large crate that went in, XX and they said that the problem was that the volume of the crate, not the weight, they were kind of difficult to handle because they were large crates, but that they had almost no weight to them other than the materials used to make the crate, it wasn't like they were carrying anything heavy in them.

JS: Kevin, why secret after all these years, why do they still keep it secret?

R: I think Jack Anderson answered that question for us when he was talking about the MIA situation. I saw him on CNBC, and they said, why would they keep it secret. His answer was, the government doesn't like to admit there's something going on they could do nothing about. That may be part of it right there. We also know that there was a congressional study done by the Brookings Institute particularly for NASA about the peaceful applications of space, and one of the questions addressed was extraterrestrial contact. In that report they determined that any time a superior civilization or a technologically superior civilization gets in contact with a technologically inferior civilization, the inferior civilization XX. And that may be part of the motivation. Protecting their own jobs and their own hides. Because what would be the attitude of people, Congress or the Department of Defense spending billions and billions of dollars and there's absolutely nothing they can do about the flying saucers. That all may be part of the problem right there. Also, there's always, I think, a number of people there can verify this who have been in the military, there's always a great inertia when something is classified to get it declassified. Top Secret material is not automatically declassified after a period of years. It has to be reviewed before it is declassified, and I think that probably some kind of inertia is involved. "All this stuff has been classified since '47, I'm not taking the responsibility for declassifying it." I think it's a combination of all those factors.

JS: If Roswell is true then, the abduction phenomena that has been out in the last several years, that lends a whole bunch of credibility to that phenomena, doesn't it?

R: Absolutely, as I say, once we get over the first hurdle, and that's proof that there's extraterrestrial spacecraft floating through our atmosphere, then a lot of the other phenomena reported, like the abduction phenomena, is that much easier to believe because we have already proven that they can get here from there. So that the people talking about the abductions, we know that there are flying saucers, that makes it that much easier to accept the stories of abductions.

JS: Where do you think we're going to be, say, a year from now?

R: We have a couple of things in the fire right now that might be able to turn this whole phenomenon around. I mean, we're at a crossroads right now. I think we were in a similar crossroads back in 1952 when Frank Scully had come out with his book, Behind the Flying Saucers. They had a crossroads there, and it would have been very easy to tip the scales in favor of those believing in the reality of the phenomena. Had Scully's source not been the con man of Silas Newton, had he had additional sources and had anything verified, I think his story would have XX the UFO phenomenon. And what we're hoping is, based on our meticulous XX and the fact that we name names, like Arthur Exon, and we can demonstrate that Arthur Exon is exactly who he says he is, we've got a biography from the Air Force that talks about him, there's a book out called Air Force Bases, that has a list of every active Air Force Base in September of 1982, it also mentions all the Base Commanders, and Arthur Exon's name is right there as the Base Commander from Wright Patterson Air Force Base. We have verified people like General Exon, and I think we can turn this whole thing around if we're all very careful in what we do. We don't leap into the wild eyed fanaticism as sometimes happens, but we're very meticulous in our research, I think we can turn the whole thing around.

DJ: Kevin, this is Don Johnson again.

R: By the way, I liked you in Miami Vice

DJ: Thank you. Exon must have some important, influential friends. Is there anybody who will back up his story? His Chief of Staff, for instance, his Adjutant, his staff officers, executives, Deputy Commander and such. Are there other people who you've talked to connected with Exon?

R: There's no one who we've talked to connected with Exon, but what I'm saying is, the documentation we can find supports Exon's story to this point. So that's another arena we're continuing to march in. We're still trying to verify a lot of stuff as well. But we're satisfied what Exon tells us dovetails with other information we've had in the past, and hadn't been able to verify up to that point. So Exon's information has been very, very good.

DJ: Well, can he give you other leads? Seems to me he's in a very, of all of your witnesses, he is someone who has been in the highest

R: He's given us the names of a couple of people, and we've called those people and talked to those people, and got some verification in that way, yes. He's given us some leads to other people who absolutely won't talk at this point. So I, what I think happened, I don't know if Don has made this clear, XX or whoever he's talked to, is that Arthur Exon's was talking out of turn, he was telling us stuff he shouldn't have been telling us, and then suddenly, one of the people we talked to, called Exon and told him that he was talking out of school. So Exon clammed up on us. But I think the important point here is Exon didn't deny anything to us up to that point. He maintains it's all true, but he won't go any further. So that's going to take a little bit of finesse to make him talk more.

DJ: Well, there's one thing I'm dying to tell you. Don Schmitt asked me to keep it under wraps, has he shared that with you? Have you talked to Don about my phone conversation with him?

R: Yeah

DJ: Would you prefer me not to discuss that at this point?

R: You see, what I think we need to do is keep some things under wrap because if rumors get back to this individual it will hamper the investigation. Don and I have tried to be very open and very free with our information, because we think a lot of people have to know what's going on. But we can't, one of the things that Bill Moore did that was wrong, they found Cavitt and Bill Moore announced it at a MUFON conference before they talked to Cavitt. They should be doing it the other way. Once you've talked to people, then share the information we get at that point to others, but if we XX things a little too early we can kinda screw ourselves up. We have to be very careful. And especially dealing with people who had contact with the government, and were told not to talk about things. We have to be very careful with our dealings.

Pat Marcatillio: Kevin, this is Pat Marcatillio. On your itinerary are you going to be in the Orlando area around the 23rd or 24th of August?

R: No

PM: We were just thinking if you were, we'd like to have you at our conference there at Disney World, just to talk to you.

R: Well, our problem is, we've got to meet with some people in XX as matter of fact on that weekend.

PM: Ok, thanks a lot. We think your book is really tremendous.

R: I appreciate that.

JS: Anybody else here before we sign off?

Bob Durant: Bob Durant, how is the media treating you guys?

R: I think the Chicago media typifies what happens to us. We called a press conference in Chicago to not really announce the publication of the book, but to announce some of the conclusions we had drawn. And of course a little bit to publicize the book. We sat there for two hours with the XX video tape excerpts of interviews with the people so they could see it wasn't Don and me misinterpreting the information, it was what these people actually had said, so they could see that for themselves. We brought in Walter Haut from Roswell, so he could answer questions about creating the press release. Then we sat down and we did interviews with the XX, we gave them all the information we possibly could. They went back to their local stations, cut the XX a minute and a half, then once it aired the anchors came on and laughed at the story. So, the media, for the most part, has not treated the story seriously. Now that's beginning to change. We had a very good writeup in the Chicago Sun Times on July 2nd. The guy, just in fairness, went out and interviewed an astronomer. I don't understand the rationale, to ask an astronomer about the Roswell case when he knows nothing about it. Kinda like, an astronomer says, well we've found a black hole orbiting the sun, and the news media calls me to find out what my opinion is. XX informed about that XX phenomenon. As is XX the astronomer's opinion, he did say something at the end of this interview that they quoted, that he just can't believe that we're all alone. So that, I mean in the universe. So, it was a favorable XX. The few reviews we've got in the various XX such as Publisher's Weekly, the review was average, I mean, it didn't really say anything disparaging about the book, in fact they reviewed it and gave it more or less a positive XX, we were very excited about it, because normally they just trash that kind of book or overlook it. We've got a very positive review coming out in the Albuquerque XX this week, another positive XX. So there are a number of places XX And we've got a couple of other meetings set up with representatives, and we may be able to turn them around. Once we can get them away from this attitude

DJ: Kevin, there's one thing I've told Don Schmitt, and if you could talk to your publisher about this, I don't know if it's possible, but it would be very important if there was a hard cover edition of your book.

R: We had that written into the contract. That if they didn't publish a hard bound edition of the book, an updated edition I might add, because there's a lot of new information we could add so we could update it, and they've got two years to get that out, so if they don't do it then we can sue the publisher.

DJ: The reason for that is because that really becomes the archival copy that libraries will buy-

R: And the thing is, what you have to understand, our motivation for getting the book out in paperback first to get it out a lot quicker, and so we could get it out in bigger numbers. That was important, because that will help us determine or find additional witnesses.

JS: Kevin, speaking of the media, is there any possibility of any type of documentary or TV program based on your book being done?

R: Yes, there are some very good possibilities of that happening. We're negotiating with a number of people in different arenas XX to get that out. I think in the next year you're going to see an awful lot more information about the Roswell event, that sort of thing. So we'll just continue.

DJ: Well, if you run out of leads, we've got a cinematographer sitting in the room here who would...

R: (laughter)

VE: Kevin, this is Vince Ellis again, you mentioned Walter Haut's name and it brought to mind a question I've been dying to ask you. When I read the book, my interpretation of the press release as I read it now is that it wasn't a mistake which required damage control, but it was a calculated move on the part of the military that a lot of people knew that something strange had crashed at Brazel's ranch, and the logical thing to do was to release an announcement that only mentioned the key things and the key players up to that point. That it would be difficult to condemn the story right off, because too many people had already been talking about it in town. I have a problem with the face value explanation of the press releases as a mistake.

R: XX this was not a mistake. As we have said, it was damage control. I think Frank Joyce had already talked about this on the radio. There were a lot of rumors running around the Roswell area. And I think what their thinking was, we'll release the story at lower headquarters, meaning the 509th Bomber Group, and then within hours we come back with an explanation from the higher headquarters. The 29 media, the press is prepared to accept the story out of the higher headquarters as being 'factual, and it squelched the rumors. Which is exactly what happened. It stopped the rumors.

VE: Looks like what they did, they set up a straw man, and knocked it down.

R: Absolutely. Absolutely. That's exactly what they did. The thing is, it diverted attention from Roswell to Fort Worth, which is exactly what they wanted. The only names that appeared in the original press release was the XX County Sheriff, I think Major Marcel. They got Marcel out of Roswell as quickly as they possibly could, and they engineered for the rancher to come in and tell a bogus story at the Roswell Daily Record. And General Ramey fielding phone calls at the higher headquarters in Fort Worth, so the higher headquarters was making the pronouncements. That's exactly what they did, they wanted to direct attention away from Roswell, and they were very successful in that. Then they stopped the media from asking the very tough questions that could have been asked, because they were up in, were now suddenly in Fort Worth away from the arena, and by the time that Marcel got back to Roswell the attention was diverted to Fort Worth, and nobody cared about it any more because it was a weather balloon.

VE: So, Marcel was the straw man, right?

R: Marcel, I think was treated as an unwilling dupe in this. He was taken to Fort Worth, he knew exactly what he had seen on that debris field. And he was not allowed to answer questions at the press conference. All the answers were given by Ramey. In fact, they've got a picture of Marcel there, two pictures of Marcel there with the balloon, all that sort of thing going on. And the press bought the explanation. It was coming from the General's office, and heck, the General wouldn't lie to them, would he?

?: He would if he was told to R: That's the point, he was told to lie to them, and he did a fantastic job of lying.

JS: They got a real good response, I think, out of what they flew in from Washington, D.C. Because, Ken Arnold, was it in June, 47, was the first mention of the flying discs, and the following month is when you have a crash, when they bring a special team in. To me it seems, that knowing the military, it seems too quickly they get something organized and together right away without letting the local commanders sift through and report exactly what was found.

R: I think what you've got to remember is they'd already had the debris in Washington on July 6th. That was the flight that took, from Roswell, took some of the debris that Brazel brought into the Sheriff's office on to Washington.

JS: So, Washington said, hey, this stuff's not earthly, or we didn't make it, so that's when they said

R: I think they began to assemble a special team to go in, but they didn't send them, I think the key factor here is they didn't send them until July 8th. A special flight came on Tuesday, July 8th. So they had all day Monday to set things up, and they waited until they got the report from Marcel and Cavitt after they had been out to the debris field to see what actually was going on. That's when they dispatched the special flight, on July 8th, so they had two days to set it up. And I think what they probably did was look at the accident investigation team that they had, and select something of similar fashion. XX this and this, because that's what they do on accident XX. Its not like it was something completely unprecedented. What they did was simply substitute what they would do in a normal crash investigation and operate in the same fashion.

JS: Anybody else? Speak now, or forever hold your peace. Kevin, I want to thank you for spending an hour or so with us.

R: Oh, glad to do it. I think its an opportunity to share some of our information with XX, and I might have said something here that will XX something that one of you guys know, so you can go out and add another piece to the puzzle. Because that's what we really need. Everybody needs to be working on this to get as much information out as we possibly can.

JS: Let's plan on talking to you about six months from now. You can update us again.

R: Sounds good to me!
