Fake "Alien" Abduction foiled by Pvt "Lapdance".

Last week of June. Mississippi River Valley. Warm, humid, day. Decided to go fish some small creeks in the coulees for panfish. Load up my tackle, hipwaders, and rods into my '88 Toyota truck. Head northeast off [REDACTED] Road.

Drove for a bit until I came around a bend when I spotted a black triangular craft hovering over a cornfield off to my left. Almost immediately after this my truck engine stopped and it coasted a few yards until I saw movement in the drainage ditch. I hit the brakes when I saw three stereotypical "Grays" poorly concealed in the vegetation.

I then felt a vibration, a high pitched tone at the edge of my hearing and became paralyzed. I felt a shot of adrenaline and I found back terror as the three "aliens" awkwardly exited the ditch and approached my truck. This is broad daylight. 1:42pm.

They walked and moved in unison with an unusual unsteady gait. The middle "alien" approached my door and peered in at me putting its left hand on the window. It attempted to open the door as it was locked. This appeared to frustrate it and attempted several times further. It then tried to roll the window down via telekinesis or some such technology. Unfortunately, the handle was broken and instead it had a vicegrip for a handle that hammed on the door plastic. It then started to slap the glass in an attempt to break it. I lost consciousness at this point.

The following was shown to me in a lucid dream state guided by an Extraterrestrial Person. I have named him "Bob" as I do not know his name. Yet. I was allowed to see what happened next from an out-of-body perspective and not "behind-the -eyes" as Bob put it.

I see myself in my truck nod out and I hit my face on the steering wheel. This woke me up and I can hear myself roar with rage.

I am watching myself fumble with the seatbelt and I get it off. I then watch as I unlock the driver door and then lay back across both seats in the cab and double stomp the door. The "alien" trying to get in was knocked down and back. Still howling obscenities, I see myself push the next closest "alien" with a hand to the face. This caused me to stumble and I followed it to the ground and the "aliens" head made a crack as it hit the asphalt.

Scrambling back to my feet, I watched myself charge the third "alien" and take a wild swinging punch that ended up clotheslining the "alien" as my right forearm connected with its lower "jaw" and neck. This caused me to lose balance again and had to regain my footing. Absolutely enraged still, I watch myself kicking this "Alien" in the side of the chest and head. The side of the chest was split open and exposed what looked like wires or hoses. I then watched as I kicked it in the head and split that open as well spilling what appeared to be brain tissue and a fair amount of what looked like amber fluid.

At this point a man on the other side of my truck dressed in a ghillie suit and camo grease paint on his face scrambled out of the brush yelling "He's trashing them! Zap him already! Fuck!" Another guy pops up a few feet away and points a black square looking thing at the "other-me" and I watch as I crumble to the ground backwards.

While all this is happening the previous aliens that were knocked down were doing these bizarre movements to get back on their feet. Attached is an image because I lack the words to write it accurately.

So, with me flat on my back these two camo-ghillie suit dudes stuff me back in my truck. They were such nice guys they even put my hat back on and my seatbelt on. (If one of you deranged pricks is reading this....I hope you fall face first into a choalla jumping cactus. No Really. Face first. No eyeprop. Face first.) They then scoop up the brains of the one

I curb-stomped into oblivion. They dragged the three of them off the road into the northside ditch. The hovering triangle craft slid over to all five of them, turned on this bright-as-the-sun light and tele dissolved or teleported "Team Blue Falcon" away. And then the triangle zipped off predictably to the southwest to go hide at Papoose Lake or some other shady military base. (Can you imagine being that pilot watching that whole thing go pear-shaped, upside down and FUBAR all while trying to fuck over a guy who used to be on your team cleaning up your messes? I hope you drink yourself to liver failure if you're that guy reading this KMA pud knocker.

Anyway I watch myself shake off the effect of the nefarious square pistol zapper panic button. The truck still won't start, so I get out obviously disoriented and try repeatedly to push start it by popping the clutch. Only people that know how to drive manual transmissions will get this.

Here is where my trip down memory lane with "Bob" the Extraterrestrial Person ends.

The moral of the tale is: Don't fucking sign a government NDA, even if they promise you a lifetime of hookers, blow, and money. They will try to rape you with toy robots and tech stolen from murdered space people if you ever grow a conscience.
