

USO's (Mystery beneath the waves)

By Michael Schratt

What do we really know about what goes on under the world's oceans, and lakes? It's been said that man has spent more time on the surface of the moon than exploring the depths of the deepest oceans. Thousands of reports from Mariners, Commanders, Captains, and Masters of ships dating back hundreds of years indicate that USO's (Unidentified Submerged Objects) are a documented reality. In fact, over 50% of all UFO sightings are directly related to craft plunging into, coming out of, or being tracked moving under bodies of water. Why have officially sponsored technical research papers like the 1969 University of Colorado $600,000 "Condon Report" failed to address this historically significant fact? Of the 1,517 foreign (non-USA) UFO reports categorized by famed astronomer Jacques Vallee, 50% were at sea. Are USO's some type of unexplained meteorological phenomenon, "living" entity, or mechanical machine? This article will explore some of the most reliable USO cases, including two which involved the U.S. Navy.

(Navy Icebreaker used in “Operation Deepfreeze 1955-1956)

On a cold and dark evening during the Navy’s “Operation Deepfreeze” exercise (1955-1956), a startling encounter took place in Admiralty Bay (Antarctic region) which was witnessed by two crew members and a scientist aboard the icebreaker USCGC Eastwind (pictured above). At around 9:00 PM, a “silvery colored bullet shaped craft” was seen to break through 37 feet of solid ice, and fly off into the sky at a high rate of speed. A Brazilian scientist by the name of Dr. Rubens J. Villela was shocked as he saw the craft tear through the ice. As it broke through, the strange craft hurled enormous blocks of ice high into the sky (see illustration below). It left a circular shaped hole in the ice immediately after it departed. Two additional eyewitnesses (an officer and helmsmen) also noted that boiling water and steam was seen coming out of the circular shaped hole where the craft had broken through. (Source: Invisible Residence by Ivan T. Sanderson)

(Operation Deepfreeze illustration by Bill McDonald)

(USS Wasp aircraft carrier)

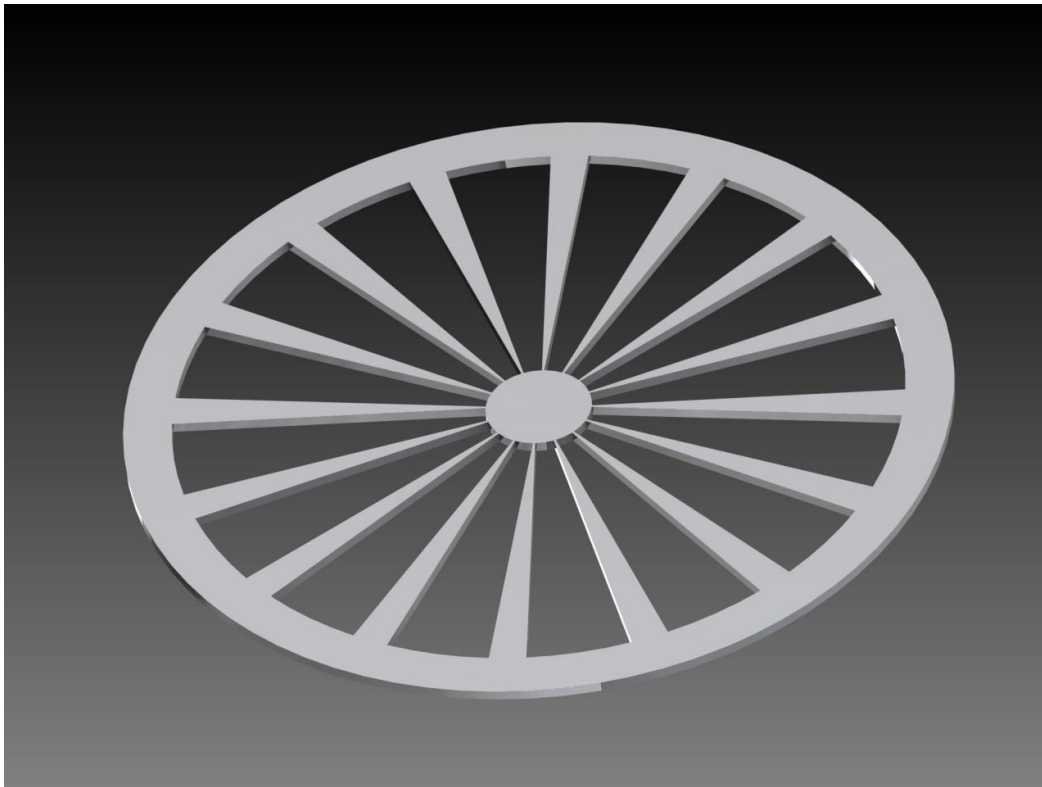

(USO tracked by the U.S.S. Wasp)

During a 1963 naval training exercise off the coast of Puerto Rico, an astonishing event took place. Five naval vessels were involved including the USS Wasp which served as the “command ship”. Two American submarines are believed to have taken part as well. Each craft was linked by way of an advanced electronic communications system. The strange “event” occurred when a sonar operator in one of the smaller ships reported to the bridge that one of the submarines had “broken formation” and was in pursuit of an unknown object. The underwater object was travelling at “over 150 knots” (172 mph), and was being tracked by multiple sensors. By comparison, the semi-official record for submerged submarines is 45 (knots (51.8 mph) which is held by the U.S. Navy’s Skipjack class. In addition, it was reported that the USO was being monitored for a total of four days, and that it reached depths of up to 27,000 feet.

An interesting case reported by author Charles Fort indicates that an enormous object rose out of the sea off of Cape Race on November 12, 1887. The object rose to a height of approximately fifty feet, and then advanced close to the British steamer S.S. Siberian. It was described as looking like a large “ball of fire”. The Captain indicated that the strange object was moving against the wind, and that he had seen similar phenomenon in that location before.

As published in The Diary of Andrew Bloxam (1925), at about three in the morning (August 12, 1825) crew members were astonished to find that everything around them had become brightly illuminated. Looking to the East, they spotted a large round luminous object rising up from the sea to the clouds, and then descend again out of sight. The strange object was dull red in color, and about the size of the sun.

(Light-wheel reported through the ages by Ocean explorers)

On a voyage up the Persian Gulf during May of 1880, a strange sight was seen from the deck of the steamer Patna. Around 11:30 PM, crewmembers noticed a large “luminous wheel” which appeared on both sides of the ship. The unknown objects were rotating, and included “spokes” which seemed to push the ship along. Each wheel contained sixteen spokes which measured approximately 900 feet in length. The wheels emitted a phosphorescent gleam which seemed to glide along the surface of the sea.

A nearly identical case was reported by the Captain of the steamship Bintang on June 10, 1909 (published in the Nautical Meteorological Annual). At around 3:00 AM, while sailing through the Straits of Malacca, an enormous wheel of light was spotted on the surface. The unusual object had “long arms issuing from a center around which the whole system appeared to rotate.” Apparently, the craft was so large that only half of it be seen over the horizon at any one time. This may indicate that the wheel could have been over five miles in diameter. The entire sighting lasted fifteen minutes.

As reported in Jacques Vallee’s publication Anatomy of a Phenomenon, on November 2, 1885 a very luminous blue/green flame was reported off the coast of Constantinople. The unknown object was moving at a height of approximately five to six meters above the water. It proceeded to make a series of turns around a ferryboat pier at Scutari. Its high intensity light lit up nearby streets and homes, and after 90 seconds, it fell into the sea without a sound.

During the summer of 1945, crew members of the U.S. Army Delarof spotted a large round object which had just emerged from the sea. The ship was on its way back to Seattle from Alaska. The unknown object climbed straight up, and then began to circle the ship. It was estimated to be approximately 250 feet in diameter. After several minutes, the object silently disappeared to the south.

In late summer of 1954 crew members of the Groote Beer (a Netherlands Government ship) reported seeing a flat moon-like object rise out of the ocean eighty miles off the coast of New York. The USO was gray in color, and had bright lights around its edges.

On July 22, 1955 multiple eyewitnesses in Santa Marina California reported seeing a long silvery object emerge from the sea. (Reported in UFO investigator Vol. IV, No. 5, March 1968)

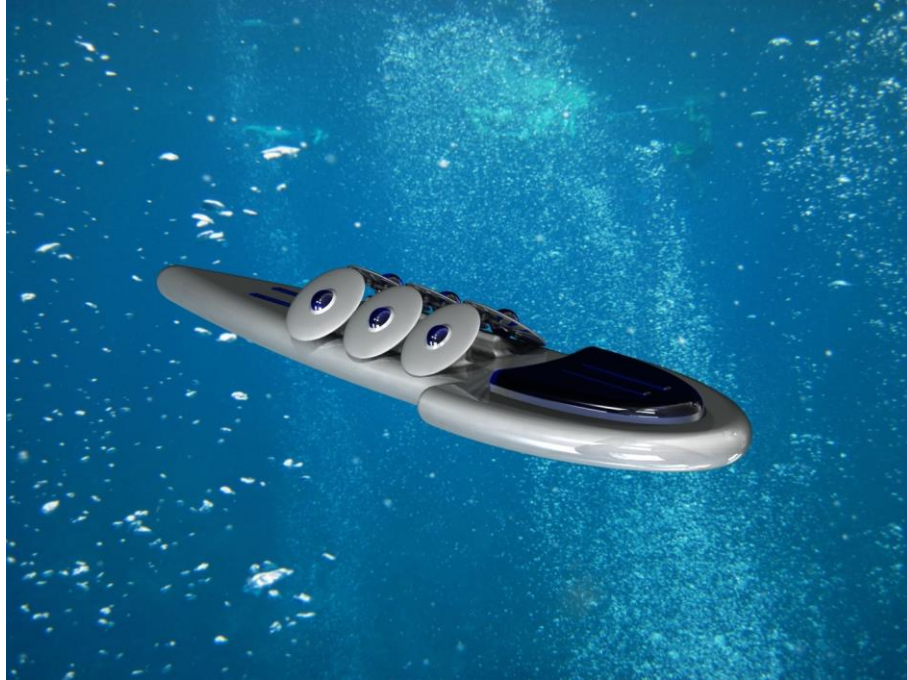

On December 13, 1956 a Swedish ship contacted the harbor control at La Guaira, Venezuela, and reported that a cone-shaped object was falling into the sea of the Venezuelan coast. The unknown object was brilliantly lit, and emitted “strange glares”. When the object hit the water, a large explosion was heard. At the area of impact, the water became extremely colored. Then, after the colors dissipated, the water became agitated with a “boiling motion”. (Reported in the APRO Bulletin January 1964)

On September 1, 1956 police officers at Porthcawl, Glamorgan Wales saw a dark red colored object with a jagged black streak across its center rise from the sea. It was described as being a “good deal larger than a full-sized harvest moon”. (Source FSR Vol 3 No. 6)

In March of 1959, on the coast of Poland near Kolobrzeg, Polish soldiers saw the sea suddenly become agitated. A triangular object measuring four meters per side came out of the water, and started to fly in circles over the barracks, then sped away and vanished. (Source: Anatomy of a Phenomenon by Jacques Vallee).

On June 14, 1992 multiple eyewitnesses observed hundreds of bright disc shaped lights beneath the water near Catalina Island. The lights were observed for approximately two minutes. Then suddenly, hundreds of saucer shaped craft silently emerged and hovered for a few seconds, then rapidly accelerated into the sky. Reports came in from as far as Malibu, and the Long Beach Coast Guard was notified.

On February 7, 1989 Scuba divers, and eyewitnesses on the shore witnessed a strange USO emerge from the water off the coast of Catalina Island. The craft remained on the surface for approximately 90 seconds, and then it released dozens of smaller disc shaped craft from its upper exterior. After about one minute, the unusual craft slowly dove back beneath the surface.

On August 4, 1967 Dr. Hugo Yopez was fishing in the Gulf north of Arrecife Venezuela when he noticed that the water began to boil in a circle measuring eighteen feet in diameter. Then, he witnessed a gray/blue globe emerge from the surface and hover nearby. The strange object had water dripping off its exterior, and was described as having a “revolving section with triangular windows”. It then shot upwards into space. (Source: The UFO Investigator Vol. IV No. 5 March 1968)

(American ship shown for clarity)

May 15, 1879 Indian Ocean – The sailing ship HMS Venture was paced by two “wheels of light” for half an hour before the mysterious USO’s sank out of sight.

April 19, 1957 near Japan – Aboard the fishing boat Kitsukawa Maru, the crew spotted two strange silvery craft dive into the ocean at terrific speed, yet no wreckage was ever found. The objects were reported to be approximately ten meters long. As they hit the water, they created a violent turbulence. (Reported in FSR World roundup of UFO sightings and events 1958)

On September 2, 1963 (off the coast of Sardinia west of Italy) a radar operator aboard the U.S.S. F.D.R. reported a contact 600 miles from the ship, and at an altitude of 80,000 feet. Shortly thereafter, the unknown object approached the ship at a range of ten miles and 15,000 feet. Then suddenly, the craft began making incredibly sharp angle turns, and was clocked on the ship's radar travelling at a speed of 4,000 mph. Two F4 Phantom jets were launched from the deck of the F.D.R. to investigate the unknown craft. Then suddenly, the strange object disappeared from the radar screen only to reappear seconds later. At that point the craft approached within a few hundred feet of the F.D.R. and hovered for a few minutes while in full view of multiple crew members. Records specifically pertaining to this historic case including entries into ship's log book were subsequently covered up by official U.S. Navy commanding officers. In fact, during its thirty-two commission, the F.D.R. has been involved in at least six separate incidents involving USO's. It was specifically known to be the first aircraft carrier to carry nuclear weapons onboard full time. Is an unknown intelligence monitoring our weapons capabilities?

Authentic sightings of USO's from multiple sources indicate that unknown craft are roaming the Ocean's of the world. These craft have the capability of outrunning the most sophisticated submarines built by both the United States and Russia. In addition, they can emerge from the sea, break through solid ice, and fly off into space. Eyewitnesses report that many of these USO's emit no noise, indicating the strong possibility of an advanced propulsion system. The vast volume of USO reports from antiquity coupled with verified encounters reported by the U.S. Navy demand that these cases be further examined by the scientific community.