

▲ CLASSIFIED ▲

COMMUNICATIONS

CLASSIFIED COMMUNICATIONS--'C-COM'--IS AN INDEPENDENT UFO/FORTEAN NEWSLETTER PUBLISHED MONTHLY

JULY 1995

VOL. 3 No. 7

PSYCHOTRONIC WEAPONS & NON-HUMAN INTELLIGENCES (NHI)

by Ray Boeche

The following is an edited version of material given to me in late 1991-early 1992 by two scientists who claim to be working in weapons research and development for the Department of Defense.

I am not in a position to comment on the truthfulness of the information. The two men, for all intents and purposes, seem to be who and what they claim. The nature of their claims makes verification difficult, if not impossible.

Divulging this information was the result of a moral dilemma, when these two individuals, both Christians, became alarmed at the course their research into Psychotronic Weapons was taking under the direction of their superiors. They described an obsessive effort to contact and attempt to control what they referred to as "non-human intelligences (NHI)", and to harness these NHI for military and intelligence uses.

The efforts had progressed well past attempts at practical applications of David Bohm's theories, and had grown to encompass the use of, according to their statements, "satanic rituals and ritual magic along the lines of that espoused by Aleister Crowley, including human sacrifices." These gentlemen stated their concerns that even when they were apparently able to harness, or channel these forces or abilities for "good" uses, the force would "turn", and ultimately all of those subjects involved suffered varying degrees of negative effects from contact with these forces. They are convinced that what is being tapped into in all instances is evil, and that this research should cease.

Contact has continued on a limited basis, with no new information forthcoming. I cannot divulge further information regarding these sources due to promises of confidentiality. Again, I make no claim for the truthfulness of these statements. The information was presented in a very formal, "scripted" fashion, which impressed me as odd. I was allowed to take notes during most of the discussion, but was asked to cease at times. Please remember though, the possibility is very real that the whole scenario is disinformation.

◁ ▷ ◁ ▷ ◁ ▷ ◁ ▷ ◁ ▷ ◁ ▷ ◁ ▷ ◁ ▷ ◁ ▷ ◁ ▷ ◁ ▷ ◁ ▷

Research is being done on teleportation, healing, extracting information from the brains of dead subjects, remote viewing, developing computers with the ability to interpret and record the waveforms of thoughts, enabling them to be recorded and/or transmitted.

PROPOSED MECHANISM OF PARANORMAL EVENTS BASED ON THE RESEARCH OF DAVID BOHM (see his book,
"Wholeness and the Implicate Order"):

The ink is now enfolded into the glycerine—you can't see it, but you know it's there. Where is it? It is no longer in any single position. It is spread out, nowhere and everywhere.

Now, if you reverse the direction of the cylinders, the thread of ink begins to reappear.

This is the mechanism of how we are aware of reality. Enfolding and unfolding the ink drops in the glycerine is comparable to enfolding and unfolding an object backward and forward through time and space.

When you throw a pebble into a pond, the ripples move from the point where the pebble hit the water, hit the edge of the pond and create more ripples that move back toward the center of the pond, and all these ripples run into each other and the points at which they cross are called interferences.

This is the principle behind the hologram. Every point in a hologram contains the entire picture, just like the first example, where every point in the glycerine contained ink. What this means, is that to form a picture of the pebble we don't have to have all the points where the ripples interfered with each other, we only need one of them.

Using this, you can search the enfolding medium of space and time for the Fourier components of an object, forward or backward through time. Everything that ever existed has produced lasting interference patterns in the sea of radiation formed at the instant of creation.

Page - 2

remember something. You see the image in your mind, though the object itself is somewhere else in time and space.

The world is composed, in one sense, of interference patterns—of frequencies. The frequency of things can be interfered with by disruptive static frequencies. If an object is characterized by certain frequencies, it will be altered if those frequencies are altered.

The human brain constantly performs Fourier analysis on all the interference patterns in the enfolding medium. The universe is a hologram, and the brain is part of that hologram. The brain contains all of space and time, just as each fragment of a hologram contains the entire picture. If you had full access to the content of your brain, you would be able to see everything.

This is how the paranormal works. That is how psychics know what is happening remotely. And by interfering with the Fourier components of objects, whether inanimate, or living cells, they can heal, create illness, influence electronic components. Their minds are tuned to the universal hologram—they have access to all the Fourier components.

All human brains perform Fourier analysis, but some can access the Fourier transforms to achieve paranormal feats. These feats, performed by humans, are unreliable and unquantifiable.

However, a psychotronic device could perform these functions better than humans, just as a computer performs mathematical functions better than humans. In addition to being able to see and predict the device would also be able to exert an effect on animate and inanimate objects.

Psychokinetic ability follows an inverse-square law—the degree of motion which can be caused decreases as the square of the mass of the affected body.

What is being attempted is to electronically recognize frequency interference patterns in space, screen them for Fourier components, and transform the components into viewable holographic images.

Fourier transforms are produced because everything produces an interference pattern that is either an amplified signal or a scattered wave pattern containing information that was present in the brainwaves, or, in the case of something inanimate, in the object itself.

The atmospheric carrier wave spreads the interference pattern over the surface of the Earth, and certain people or devices can perform Fourier transforms to "pick off" the interference patterns and reconstruct the originals. The Fourier components of entire scenes—buildings, landscapes, individuals, etc.—are decodable by the receiver.

The human organism is a liquid-crystal-like assembly of biomolecules, and is capable of coherent and monochromatic amplification of incoming electromagnetic waves in the kilohertz region by more than a millionfold. Neutrinos can be responsible for the release of coded thought waves. Since neutrinos can travel unimpeded through the Earth or other barriers, this is consistent with the independence of psychotronic effects to distance and to magnetic shielding.

Macroscopically, experimental evidence indicates that will-influenced events can occur, for example, when tumbling dice are influenced to come to rest in a desired position.

David Bohm believes that matter must be described by a multistate wave function. The quantum wave is a wave of knowledge and information that isn't arranged in terms of position and time, but as frequency and amplitude information. Consciousness, as it performs Fourier transforms, may access any part of space and time to acquire this knowledge and information. This generalization from microcosm to macrocosm also makes possible the appearance of a macro-object anywhere in the universe.

Planck's equation states that frequency and energy are the same thing. We know from Einstein that energy and matter are convertible. It follows then, that frequency can be matter. Thus, from frequency interference patterns we should be able to produce the physical objects that produced these patterns. This is how psychotronic devices function.

Researchers are now working on means to interface thought and behavior directly through a transducer attached to the head and read directly by computer. The computer can monitor, modify, and control behavior without the subject's awareness.

There have been demonstrations of the psychotronic manipulation of consciousness. Manipulation of physical health, as well as human consciousness, thoughts, emotions, and will, has been achieved.

A psychotronic device is impossible to defend against, and its effects, including changes in brain waves, can result in personality changes and/or physical pain that would alter combat effectiveness of troops, or when used against military and political leaders, impair their ability to command and govern. Such devices would be capable of negatively affecting healthy tissue as well as disrupting fundamental brain rhythms, heart control, and biological clock mechanisms.

THOUGHTS ON THE INFORMATION

by Ray Boeche

(1) Portions of eyewitness testimony would be easily explained by this theory, but is the type of work they are describing even possible? If these techniques are well-developed, why not assassinate Sadaam Hussein psychically, for instance?

(2) Is this possibly another way to try and hide experimentation with alien technology?

(3) Presentation seemed very much scripted as if they were presenting material memorized from a master script.

EDITORIAL COMMENTS

by Erich A. Aggen, Jr.

The preceding article was addressed to "all interested researchers" and was given to me during one of our recent monthly UFO meetings. The original article had no title and had obviously been copied many times. The article also had no address for Mr. Ray Boeche. Thus, any feedback from this article should be addressed to : Erich A. Aggan, Jr., 4319 Holmes, Kansas City, MO 64110-1553. If we obtain Mr. Boeche's address at some time in the future we will forward the comments, etc., to him.

[illegible]

CLASSIFIED INTELLIGENCE

NO CONSENSUS ON ALIEN AUTOPSY

FILM: British UFO researchers have mixed opinions of the alleged Roswell alien autopsy film. Operation Right To Know Britain believes the film may be a crude hoax while other British UFO researchers think the film may be genuine. Most ufologists in the U.S., on the other hand, seem to be giving the film the thumbs down as an out-and-out fabrication. At the very least, the film has generated alot of heated debate and controversy.

The film itself is black & white and comprises several segments, each about 3 minutes in duration, making the total film length about 20 minutes.

The opening scene shows the purported alien body full length, face-up on a table or bench, in a small pale walled room. A close-up pan of the alien figure from feet to head reveals broad feet with six toes on each foot; the lower legs are quite broad around the middle section, as are the upper legs—presenting a muscular appearance—almost frog-like; the right leg has an open gash 10 to 14 inches in length with a dark interior which runs from above the knee position (although no knee is visible) down, and is on the top part of the leg; the abdomen is swollen relative to the chest which is flat in profile and rounded in section; dark spots on the sides of the chest may be nipples; neck is human-like; head is round and large relative to body; chin is rounded; mouth is open and oval in shape with thin dark lips; mouth interior is dark or black; nose is "squal" and very small; ears are human-like but very small; eyes are dark and appear to be about 50% larger than human eyes; no eye brows are visible but ridges above and below the eyes seem to indicate eye lids; the forehead is 20% to 30% larger than human proportions.

The "alien" body also appeared to be hairless. The arms were also muscular in appearance but less so than the legs. Arm length was human-like in proportion although the hands were broader and contained six digits each like the feet. Looking up from the feet the body appears to have a vertical groove or slit in the pubic area although no pronounced genitals are visible. The legs are only slightly parted.

Two doctors enter the field of view and one doctor removes a thin covering from one of the alien's eyes. The doctor removes the covering very quickly as if he had prior knowledge of the procedure. The eye covering or membrane is dark in color and thin but stiff. The eye covering retains its shape when it is transferred to a jar of clear liquid.

A long autopsy incision from the left side of the neck down to the left side of the chest to about waist position results in a trickle of dark fluid from the cut line. The chest area is opened but no rib cage is evident—it appears to be dark and hollow as though interior organs had already been removed. However, two fist-sized organs are removed with surgical scissors and put in metal bowls. The head is opened with a saw and a large lump of material is removed. Attached to this material is a small amount of very soft material. The larger lump appears to be somewhat rigid but flattens out when placed in a metal tray.

One of the major points of contention about the film revolves around the fact that the alien cadaver does not match previous eyewitness descriptions of the aliens found at the Roswell crash site. Segments of the film also appear staged and the sequencing of the segments seems to be disjointed with several apparent omissions. (Credit: Ron Russell).

THE PENTAGON'S SECRET SCIENTISTS:

The Cincinnati Enquirer for September 17, 1989, reported that since 1959, a society of about 50 university scientists calling itself JASON has quietly guided some of the nation's biggest security decisions.

Some former JASON physicists have criticized their former colleagues. According to one former JASON member, "They're kids playing in the sandbox with toy soldiers." He said JASON is used by the generals and admirals to win funding from lawmakers. "Some admiral will tell Congress they've had the world's greatest experts look at (their project)...What they don't tell Congress is the world's greatest experts said not to do it." (Credit: The Cincinnati Enquirer & Richard Whitmire via Tom Adams).

MISSOURI TIME MACHINE?: In January, Michael E. Marcum, 21, was arrested for the theft of six 350-pound power company transformers in Stanberry, MO. Marcum said he needed the transformers for a "time machine" he was building. He wanted to transport himself into the future to find out the winning lottery numbers, and then return to buy a ticket. (Credit: Pitch Weekly 4/95).

UFO OVER ST. LOUIS: The St. Louis Post-Dispatch for 3/17/95 reported that several persons saw a UFO over St. Louis. One of those who saw the UFO was Ralph Powers, a construction worker from Lebanon, MO. He said it "was one big glowing light" that "stopped in midair and then zigzagged and took off."

Powers was walking with his girlfriend on the McKendree College campus about 10:30 p.m. Wednesday when they saw the egg-shaped UFO flash across the sky.

The U.S. Air Force later said the UFO was "a meteor." However, meteors do not stop in midair or follow zigzag courses!

THE BLOB, MISSOURI-STYLE: In 1991, Leo Thompson of Forsyth, MO, was looking for caves in the Mark Twain National Forest when he discovered a mysterious, green, amorphous mass of unidentifiable origin. He said "It just looked like molten lava all over the side of the hill." He collected samples of the plastic-like substance and gave them to the Taney County Sheriff's Department.

The Sheriff's Department investigated the site of the unknown substance, which consisted of a large amount of "debris" scattered over a 35-foot area of forest land east of Hilda, MO.

The strange mass of debris was first thought to have been some sort of space "junk" from a satellite that re-entered the atmosphere but local residents reported that they had seen the same substance or debris anywhere from eight to 20 years ago.

The U.S. Forest Service later determined that the substance posed no toxic or radiation danger, and the site remained open to the public.

Most or all of the strange material was thought to have been carted away by curious parkgoers anxious to have some as souvenirs. (Credit: The Associated Press, 8/16/91).

CLASSIFIED COMMUNICATIONS is published monthly and is available for $12.00 per year. Checks or M.O.s should be made payable to: Erich A. Aggen, Jr., 4319 Holmes, Kansas City, MO 64110-1553. Write for Free sample pages and/or issues.

CROP CIRCLES:

SOME PHILOSOPHICAL OBSERVATIONS

BY ERICH A. AGGEN, JR. (C) 1995

On the surface, knowledge resembles a system of symbols denoting an object, event, or action. That which the symbol denotes is its meaning. Symbol and meaning are indivisible; there can be no symbol without meaning and vice versa.

The evolution and refinement of knowledge has brought into being highly organized and structured systems of artificial, symbolic languages such as the symbolic languages of computers, mathematics, chemistry, and electronics. These languages are closely connected with the natural languages, but are relatively independent systems of symbols and signs. Science often uses symbols as a means of expressing the results of knowledge or cognition. Symbols are used to provide precise definitions that are essential to clear and unambiguous communication. Thus, symbols provide a more direct and accurate reflection of objective reality than is possible with other systems of communication.

In The Tao of Symbols, author James N. Powell observed several important things about symbols:

1. Symbols convey knowledge about themselves.
2. In using symbols, we are used by them.
3. A single symbol is part of a greater and more complex whole.
4. Symbols transcend normal thinking and affect us directly.
5. We are capable of transcending symbols and seeing to their "essence."
6. Symbols are instruments for probing consciousness.
7. Attempting to analyze symbols through logic and reason is a futile exercise.
8. Any symbol system that does not encourage transcendence becomes a "prison."
9. When collapsed into a two-dimensional diagram, symbols become the "geometry of the spirit."

Writer Philip Slater noted in his book, The Wayward Gate, that "one of the strangest discoveries of our century was the finding that objects—particularly organic ones—are physically affected by the shape of the spaces in which they are placed. Perhaps all the forces we know and understand are produced by shapes, as well as many that we don't. Perhaps all shapes exert pressure to mold energy into patterns that extend and revitalize themselves...we don't know what shapes coerce our being."

Crop circles and pictograms are some of the best examples of the unifying commonality inherent in certain groups of archetypal symbols. This commonality also transforms crop circles and pictograms into social hieroglyphs with a social "weight" and meaning far in excess of their simple physical existence as unknown symbols in crop fields.

Crop circles have had (and continue to have) a dynamic and conflictual affect on the human psyche. They encourage an activist attitude on the part of the investigator and they stimulate the creative production, rather than the passive receipt of knowledge. They invite the active participation of all mankind in the act of shaping and discovering knowledge.

Crop circles are a kind of living tapestry woven out of the organic fiber of the Earth. This is undoubtedly the most evocative and universal medium that an alien intelligence could have chosen to convey a message to mankind.

Many ufologists believe the vast majority of "genuine" crop circles and pictograms are the products of an extraterrestrial intelligence (or intelligences) which utilizes primarily circular or saucer-shaped spacecraft and/or unmanned "probes" (i.e., "genuine" UFOs) for various purposes. Some researchers have even been present when crop circles and pictograms were apparently formed or created by UFOs. UFOs have also been observed flying above or near many crop formations—both before and after they were formed.

Symbols such as crop circles and pictograms can convey moods and feelings in both subtle and direct ways. The reason symbols have this emotional affect on the human psyche is somewhat mysterious. However, archetypal symbols have been a part of the human learning process for millions of years. Thus, this symbolic patterning may be due to some type of ancient and pre-existing "genetic" memory.

If crop circles are a form of notational symbolization—as they would be in a purely human context, then such symbols may refer to other symbol systems in the same way that written numbers refer to spoken numbers and written language refers to spoken language. Such notational systems are a means of codifying information within a given culture.