

Disclosure Project Intelligence Archive - Module Three

Executive Summary

Adapted from an oral presentation by Dr. Greer - March 2024

Covert Operations Concerning the Retrieval and Handling of Extraterrestrial Vehicles.

This module is taken from a live event in March of 2024, and documents over 130 instances where extraterrestrial objects have been downed and retrieved, revealing a significant operational scope involving major defense contractors such as Northrop Grumman, Lockheed Skunk Works, Boeing, and Raytheon. This operation utilizes advanced electrogravitic technologies and electromagnetic pulse (EMP) weapons, indicating a high level of technological advancement and capability.

The operations are supported by extensive underground bases, known as deep underground military bases (DUMBs), which are equipped with sophisticated tunneling technologies and high-speed transportation systems. These facilities are interconnected, allowing for rapid movement and operations over large distances.

Despite the technological prowess displayed, these operations are shrouded in secrecy, raising serious legal and ethical concerns. The unauthorized use of EMP weapons and stringent protocols to maintain secrecy, including the erasure of evidence and personnel, suggest potential violations of legal and constitutional boundaries.

The existence and scale of these operations have profound implications for governance, accountability, and human-extraterrestrial relations. They underscore the need for greater transparency and regulatory oversight, particularly concerning interactions with extraterrestrial civilizations and the militarization of space.

This summary highlights the critical need to address the complex issues at the intersection of national security, technology, and ethics in managing extraterrestrial encounters.

INDIVIDUALS ARE NOW AUTHORIZED TO DISCLOSE INFORMATION WITHOUT FACING LEGAL PENALTIES. The projects they may expose have been deemed illegal. Any supposedly classified information related to these illegal projects can be brought forward, as these classifications are considered invalid due to the unlawful nature of the projects themselves.

ANY POTENTIAL WHISTLEBLOWERS NOW HAVE PROTECTION. This protection removes any previous barriers to coming forward with information, whether it involves material evidence (bodies, metals, etc.), documents, or methods related to these undisclosed criminal enterprises which legally LACK ANY LEGITIMATE NATIONAL SECURITY CLAIMS.

THIS IS A CALL TO ACTION, aimed at those who have been hesitant, by providing them the security assurances needed to disclose information that could be crucial in addressing and correcting clandestine and unauthorized activities.

In the archive, there are over 130 documented cases of extraterrestrial objects being downed, crashing, and subsequently retrieved. These incidents suggest that it is not a matter of these crafts being unable to navigate Earth's atmosphere. Given their origin from distant star systems, the very idea defies scientific reason.

[\[see crash retrievals section\]](#)

These documented cases represent just a fraction of the actual occurrences, suggesting a much larger, hidden reality. To illustrate the extent of secretive activities related to extraterrestrial objects: shortly before Dr. Greer was critically injured in October 2023, he flew over a classified airspace in the western United States with a senior operative keen on disclosing this information to the public.

During this flight, they observed the underground entrance at the Lockheed Hallendale site, indicating the scale and sophistication of operations involved in these matters.

The linked captured screenshots are from a video taken during a helicopter flight. The helicopter was piloted by one of the top pilots in the world with Dr. Greer next to him and the director of the strike team behind them. This event took place in August of 2023 as they were flying over desert sites near Lockheed and Northrop facilities.

These sites are known for the emergence of man-made craft, which originate from underground and ascend without needing a runway. They hover and then move across the desert. These crafts are positioned over a diamond marker and subjected to tests to determine if they are shielded against electromagnetic pulses. These tests are hazardous and can sometimes result in fatal outcomes for the pilots.

Due to their proximity to the site, there was concern about nearby security vans potentially activating devices that could threaten their safety. This excursion clearly illustrates the risks involved in these investigations, as well as the dual nature of activities at these sites: the testing of man-made UFOs (ARVs – Alien Reproduction Vehicles) with advanced electrogravitic technologies developed by major defense contractors like Northrop Grumman, Lockheed Skunk Works, Boeing, and Raytheon, as well as the systems used to disable them.

The locations of numerous sites, including underground bases where operations are conducted are well-known. When these sites go operational, typically during the night, the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) will establish a Temporary Flight Restriction (TFR) over the area. These TFRs are not permanent but are enforced specifically when operations are active, requiring pilots to navigate around the restricted zones.

The emotional impact of these operations became apparent when one of the operatives, who has been involved for many years at a specific site, became tearful during a disclosure with Dr. Greer. At least two extraterrestrial vehicles are intercepted and downed each year at this location. This particular site, operational for about 40 years, is estimated to have been responsible for the downing of over 80 extraterrestrial vehicles.

These are only two of many active sites, leading to an estimate that up to 160 extraterrestrial vehicles could have been downed across these two sites alone over the years.

These interception and downing operations are not confined to one location but are a widespread practice. Similar systems are in place at Pine Gap in Australia, across the western United States, along the East coast at Eglin Air Force Base in Florida, the northern Nevada test range, and remote areas around the Dugway Proving Grounds in Utah.

Interestingly, none of these incidents appear in the crash retrieval archives, suggesting a significant gap in the public record of such encounters.

This briefing also contains a detailed module on the various facilities providing an extensive look at the global capabilities of certain operations, emphasizing that these are not limited to any one region but are widespread, extending across Europe, the oceans, Australia, South America, and beyond.

Globally, over a thousand extraterrestrial vehicles have been downed, with their occupants either killed, captured, or tortured.

If these extraterrestrial civilizations were hostile, they could have easily eradicated humanity, especially considering the primitive state of human technology in the 1940s, such as vacuum tubes.

This perspective was challenged during Dr. Greer's visit to Wright Patterson Air Force Base in 1993 by Colonel Kanola, who questioned the non-hostile nature of these beings. Despite humanity's often reckless actions, the fact that people are still alive and free suggests that these extraterrestrial beings are non-hostile.

These civilizations are likely not pleased with the current state of the world, particularly the cowardice of leaders, the apathy of the populace, and the corruption within high-tech, illegal operations. Their displeasure, though significant, has not reached a point where they wish to annihilate humanity.

Yet.

A concerning threshold exists as human technologies continue to advance and expand aggressively into space. There is a potential "red line" that could provoke a more severe response from extraterrestrial civilizations if humanity becomes a broader cosmic threat.

Recall that the former head of the Lockheed Skunkworks, Ben Rich, once famously said, "We have the means to take E.T. home."

A crucial point. It underscores the unsupervised and unsanctioned actions of the highest-tech entities on the planet, acting with malice and aggression towards extraterrestrial civilizations.

Not all extraterrestrial beings come from a primate legacy like humans. Some have evolved from species that lack any concept of organized war or murder, making them particularly vulnerable to human aggressions. We humans are currently the problematic presence in the universe, not the extraterrestrials.

The concept of false disclosure, a theme Dr. Greer previously explored in the 1990s in his paper, "When Disclosure Serves Secrecy" outlines ongoing deceptive practices in the media, the UFO subculture, Congress, and even at the presidential level, where extraterrestrial beings are falsely portrayed as an invading, hostile force. This portrayal serves the interests of global corporate, financial, and covert entities, which seek to unite the world around the concept of an alien threat, a strategy conceived in the 1950s.

It is still their playbook today,

Intervening against a technologically advanced group requires immense courage. This group possesses technology that far surpasses conventional military assets like the B-2 stealth bomber, with capabilities that have been portable since at least the 1990s.

One team member was in Bosnia during the conflict in the Clinton era, where electromagnetic pulse (EMP) weapons were used. These weapons, which violate the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty, were capable of disabling entire regiments by frying their electronics and vehicles, effectively rendering their equipment useless and allowing for decisive military actions.

This technology has evolved significantly over the past 30 years. These EMP weapons, once cutting-edge, are now so abundant that they could be metaphorically "pulled out of a dumpster." These devices vary in their deployment; some are fixed, others are mobile, and they can be mounted on aircraft, satellites, or ships.

A particularly grim aspect of these operations involves Temporary Flight Restrictions (TFRs), under which private pilots occasionally enter restricted spaces and are subsequently taken out. The protocol that Dr. Greer was made aware of involves not only taking down these aircraft but also eliminating all on board, retrieving the wreckage, and disposing of it to the extent that the remains are completely obliterated.

The severe protocols taken to erase evidence of downed aircraft and their occupants, referred to as "biologicals," which include both humans and the aircraft itself, whether it be a Learjet, Cessna, or any other type, highlights the extreme measures taken to maintain secrecy and control within these covert operations. These disappearances are meticulously covered up through operatives, called “cutouts,” embedded in various agencies who file missing person reports that deliberately omit the actual locations of these incidents.

More alarmingly, the electromagnetic pulse (EMP) beams, meant to be confined within Temporary Flight Restricted (TFR) areas, occasionally extend beyond these boundaries, inadvertently affecting and killing innocent people outside the designated zones.

Dr. Greer advises pilots to take extreme caution and detour widely around any TFRs they encounter.

Despite the severity of these incidents, neither the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) nor the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) investigates these disappearances and deaths, which can be categorized as murders. Even those within these illegal covert operations are deeply troubled by their actions, expressing disdain for their involvement with both extraterrestrial entities and the harm inflicted upon innocent humans.

Many individuals entangled in these operations were recruited at a young age and now find themselves unable to leave, trapped in roles they never anticipated. One such poignant moment occurred between Dr. Greer and a security driver who thanked him for his efforts, highlighting the sentiment that, while Dr. Greer is free to advocate for change, those within the system are hopelessly confined.

These individuals, many of whom are fundamentally good people caught in dire circumstances, need to be liberated.

A witness designated as TE was one of the few people known to have escaped from a highly dangerous situation in the Nevada test range, having nearly lost his life there.

[\[document link\]](#)

Currently, Dr. Greer is collaborating with another substantial group planning a similar escape, an effort they refer to as "catastrophic disclosure."

The complexity of underground facilities can be likened to an ant hill, a term used in the intelligence and aerospace communities. From the surface, these facilities might seem modest, but beneath lies a vast labyrinth of structures and tunnels known as deep underground military bases (DUMBs), which also include corporate and private sectors.

The construction of these tunnels is achieved by a nuclear-powered tunneling system that utilizes intense heat to penetrate bedrock, effectively turning it into glass. This method creates large, “glassified” tunnels and spaces; a process for which the original patent dated back to 1968 is the archives.

This sophisticated technology demonstrates the advanced capabilities utilized in constructing these secretive underground installations.

The capabilities of this nuclear-powered tunneling system include efficiently sealing off water and creating vast, secure tunnels underneath populated areas. A member of Dr. Greer's team once entered a tunnel at Edwards Air Force Base and surfaced at Nellis, hundreds of miles away, demonstrating the extensive reach of these tunnels.

This information has been provided to senior investigators for the Senate Intelligence and Armed Services Committees, who, along with their senators, were previously unaware of these facilities' existence.

This highlights the importance of this archive, serving as a critical operational resource for the Senate, the Pentagon, the White House, and other governmental bodies. The vast majority of personnel in these institutions - 99% according to estimates - are ignorant of these underground systems.

This lack of awareness underscores the significant educational effort required to inform these entities about the realities beneath them. The initial development of this tunneling technology dates back to 1968, and is detailed in the official patent document, though the patent number was not specified.

New Age groups in the 1980s were fascinated with a phenomenon featured on the cover of Newsweek referred to as the "magical Taos hum."

[\[document link\]](#)

Taos is located just over 60 miles from Los Alamos. During this time an underground connector was being constructed from Los Alamos to the Dulce area in the Four Corners region, a place noted for its lack of visible surface entrances apart from a few antennas nearby. This extensive base links to other covert facilities through these underground connectors and employ rapid electromagnetic lift systems that facilitate quick transportation between various locations; from Dulce to Los Alamos, Dugway in Utah, and both Nellis and Edwards Air Force bases.

Most U.S. presidents, and few if any members of Congress are aware of these operations. This is alarming given that they are funded by U.S. taxpayer dollars through the illegal black budget.

This incident during construction of the tunnel from Los Alamos to Dulce became public knowledge due to the audible humming and vibrations it caused, leading locals to describe the phenomenon as the "earth singing." This misinterpretation of the sound, which was produced by the covert tunneling system boring through the bedrock, shows the irony of human assumptions and natural curiosity about unexplained phenomena. This event proves the significant gap in public knowledge about such secretive projects.

These modules aim to serve as an executive briefing for presidents, senators, congressmen, and media personnel, enabling them to quickly grasp the essentials of the information presented.

Skepticism and independent verification are encouraged by Dr. Greer. Reviewing the testimonies, transcripts, and interviews of top-secret witnesses available in this archive, as well as the over 800 videos, the official and uncontested documents, will bear out that the overall significance of this collection lies not in Dr. Greer's personal role, but in the information provided and its implications.

Our human existence is transient. Individuals may only be present on Earth for a century, however the evidence they gather can prove timeless. It is this understanding that drives Dr. Greer in his efforts to uncover hidden operations and agendas, providing the proof that many seek.

One incident involved a witness who was intimidated and dissuaded from testifying to AARO, the Senate Intelligence Committee, and possibly at a National Press Club event. This witness had accidentally entered a classified area at the Dugway Proving Grounds, which, according to the site map, operates as a hybrid facility with both corporate and government involvement.

A female Air Force officer, responsible for accounting and finances at Dugway, testified that approximately 52% of the facility is controlled by various corporate contractors, with the remaining 48% under government management. This hybrid structure complicates oversight and accountability because any government or Department of Justice inquiry into the operations there would predominantly encounter corporate, not government, activities.

This, as much as anything, points to the crucial role of the corporate sector and the significance of the military-industrial complex, a concept President Eisenhower famously addressed. The term "industrial" refers to corporate entities because the government itself does not manufacture anything.

Dr. Greer's uncle, who worked on the lunar module, emphasized that no part of the Apollo missions was directly built by the U.S. government but was instead contracted out to companies like Rockwell Aerospace, Grumman and others.

The system in place allows for illegal activities to be hidden within corporate entities, ensuring that they do not appear in governmental records, even during audits. This strategy of shielding unlawful actions under corporate veils is critical for Congress, the public, and the media to understand.

There is testimony from an incident involving an accidental whistleblower, a man who inadvertently accessed a restricted area due to a key badge error. This area had been hastily constructed to house a captured extraterrestrial vehicle for reverse engineering. Upon entry, the man immediately had a gun put on him due to the sensitive nature of the operations, including the dissection of ET bodies.

[\[document link\]](#)

Looking down on the Dugway Proving Grounds, the site might appear insignificant, marked only by a line of porta-potties, but this is a misleading indicator of the extensive underground facilities that lie beneath. Nearby was a substantial parking lot.

[\[image link\]](#)

The observations of Richard Foch, a senior scientist from the Naval Research Labs, noted large, silent, triangular UFOs - man-made crafts or ARVs - emerging from these remote areas during a night operation.

The massive underground complex at Dugway is so extensive that, according to a chief scientist, it could accommodate Air Force One in just one small section of the facility.

[\[image link\]](#)

There are advanced transportation technologies, fast maglev trains, that link one deep underground military base to another. These facilities are strategically deployed in various locations, including one Dr. Greer has discovered that is not far from his current location.

Traditionally, major contractors like Bechtel Corporation and HIT construction have been involved in their construction. These contractors may not always be aware of the specific purposes of the structures they build, which are often connected by high-speed, high-tech transportation links.

The strategic use of corporate entities to conceal governmental operations results in a complex situation during investigations. When inquiries are made, corporations may deflect by asserting that the operations are protected under government secrets with Top Secret/Sensitive Compartmented Information (TSCI) clearances, thus claiming they are beyond the investigators' need to know.

Conversely, government agencies might deny holding relevant information, suggesting it resides within the corporate sector without explicitly admitting so.

This obfuscation creates a "hall of mirrors" effect, complicating oversight and accountability efforts by entities such as Congress and auditing firms like KPMG. They find themselves unable to uncover the truth by traditional means due to this strategic compartmentalization.

The importance of recognizing these patterns and understanding this intricate web is crucial for anyone involved in intelligence analysis who wishes to unravel the secretive activities underpinning these operations.

The complexity of the topics discussed - understanding the operational patterns and methods used in covert projects - can help demystify their longstanding playbook.

A lieutenant colonel who managed pilots at Edwards Air Force Base and is responsible for training pilots who operated manmade UFOs, has expressed his willingness to share his knowledge openly. Dr. Greer introduced him to the Senate Intelligence and Armed Services committees where he shared information. He is also eager to testify openly before the House Oversight Committee, though responses from key members like Reps. Luna and Burchett have not yet been received.

Having left the Air Force in 2009, the lieutenant colonel was extensively briefed on operations not just at Edwards but also at Nellis and Area 51. He believes that since the operations he was involved in were illegal, he is free to discuss them publicly and is ready to disclose everything he knows in an open hearing under oath.

A constant challenge with members of the House Oversight Committee is their insistence on using a Sensitive Compartmented Information Facility (SCIF) for discussions, which suggests these projects are legal and should be protected. They are not.

Instead, Dr. Greer advocates for transparency, urging the committee to conduct these discussions openly in front of C-SPAN during an open hearing under oath, moving away from secretive settings. Such an approach is only viable after thoroughly reviewing the evidence provided by inverse witnesses and recognizing the illegality and unconstitutionality of the projects involved.

If these programs are indeed illegal and unconstitutional, they do not qualify for protection under the National Security Act or any other law. One cannot break the law and then use the same law as a shield for protection.
