

Disclosure Project Intelligence Archive - Module Four

Executive Summary

Adapted from an oral presentation by Dr. Greer - March 2024

Transparency is essential. Supposed secrets are not only known to adversaries, but they restrict vital information from those who genuinely need it. The organization deploying these technologies has them fully penetrated in real time regardless of their optics.

This module is taken from a live event in March of 2024 and highlights an extensive archive containing historical VIP correspondences, reports, and documents related to UFOs and extraterrestrial phenomena, prepared for U.S. Presidents and other high-ranking officials. The archive demonstrates governmental and covert interest in these phenomena.

Dr. Greer sought to secure executive orders for releasing classified documents and protecting witnesses during the Clinton administration. Efforts included detailed briefings with high-ranking officials, aiming to challenge the secrecy surrounding UFOs. However, these meetings faced denial and obfuscation from participants, reflecting entrenched resistance within government and intelligence structures. Notable figures like Senators John Warner and Barry Goldwater, despite their positions and influence, were constrained by counterintelligence illustrating the depth of secrecy and the challenges of penetrating these barriers.

Dr. Greer's efforts extended internationally, involving briefings for British royalty, including Prince Charles, and global figures such as Kofi Annan, then UN Secretary General. Attempts to bring UFO and extraterrestrial discussions into public platforms like the United Nations were systematically undermined by powerful covert operations, with threats and manipulation preventing the realization of these plans. The involvement of Prince Hans-Adam of Liechtenstein highlights the influence of eschatological beliefs on perceptions of extraterrestrial disclosure.

The archival documents reveal extensive manipulative tactics employed by covert operations, including staged alien abductions and threats to high-profile figures to suppress information on UFOs. Dr. Greer himself faced attacks with directed energy weapons, akin to those used in staged alien abduction scenarios, showcasing the extreme measures taken to maintain secrecy.

Advanced surveillance and communication technologies capable of penetrating operational security measures are discussed. These technologies interact with human consciousness at a profound level, challenging conventional neuroscientific views and suggesting that consciousness can manifest physical realities. Transparency in acknowledging these technologies and their implications is emphasized as crucial for deeper understanding and security.

This brief underscores the complex interplay between government secrecy, covert operations, and the pursuit of transparency in the realm of extraterrestrial phenomena, highlighting both historical efforts and ongoing challenges in the disclosure movement.

DPIA-2024

INDIVIDUALS ARE NOW AUTHORIZED TO DISCLOSE INFORMATION WITHOUT FACING LEGAL PENALTIES. The projects they may expose have been deemed illegal. Any supposedly classified information related to these illegal projects can be brought forward, as these classifications are considered invalid due to the unlawful nature of the projects themselves.

ANY POTENTIAL WHISTLEBLOWERS NOW HAVE PROTECTION. This protection removes any previous barriers to coming forward with information, whether it involves material evidence (bodies, metals, etc.), documents, or methods related to these undisclosed criminal enterprises which legally LACK ANY LEGITIMATE NATIONAL SECURITY CLAIMS.

THIS IS A CALL TO ACTION, aimed at those who have been hesitant, by providing them the security assurances needed to disclose information that could be crucial in addressing and correcting clandestine and unauthorized activities.

This module involves a detailed examination of each category within the archive.

Currently, there are 14 categories available, with the expectation that this number may eventually grow to 20. The order of review is not yet final due to ongoing website construction. However, the focus for the current session is on one particular category. This category contains several subcategories which include comprehensive reports, briefings, and documents prepared for the president, among other content.

The components of the archive include books, conferences, meetings, and Project Starlight documents from the 1990s. The section titled Historic VIP Correspondence contains eight pages of communications with notable figures such as former President Clinton, Dorothy Ives, Burl Ives, and Boutros Boutros-Ghali of the United Nations.

When the original CSETI site faced numerous cyber-attacks from various U.S. government agencies and space companies, they were meticulously tracked and documented by the site's webmaster at the time, Tony Craddock of Craddock Engineering.

Craddock, who once led the fourth-largest oil exploration corporation globally, recognized the significance of these issues and became a committed supporter of the project for 25 years until his passing.

This historical context is vital because it counters the common belief that governmental agencies have no interest in these matters. The archive now contains detailed records of these activities, listing involvement from major entities such as the National Reconnaissance Office, the NSA, and the CIA, among others.

The significance of tracking access to the CSETI site by various U.S. government agencies from unofficial IP addresses since the early 1990s, is crucial for understanding the extent of governmental interest in their activities.

A large collection of letters exchanged with President Clinton were mistakenly associated with a non-existent "Rockefeller initiative," and actually pertain to the Project Starlight initiative, which Dr. Greer began with Laurence Rockefeller's support.

In these letters, Mr. Rockefeller commits to networking and promoting the initiative with the newly inaugurated President in 1993. Contrary to conspiracy theories, Dr. Greer's involvement was not part of any secretive cabal but was a straightforward effort to advance understanding and disclosure concerning extraterrestrial phenomena.

Laurence Rockefeller's role within his family was as a "Philosopher King" who was genuinely committed to advancing the Disclosure Project. However, Rockefeller faced significant challenges, as he was unknowingly surrounded by counterintelligence operatives embedded within his organization.

During a visit to New York for meetings, Dr. Greer and his wife encountered Evan Galbraith, who had served as the U.S. Ambassador to France under President Ronald Reagan, and his wife Bootsy Galbraith, both of whom were deeply entrenched in New York's elite circles and were part of the so-called "New York 100."

In a personal conversation at the Galbraiths' Upper East Side home, Evan Galbraith revealed that he and a fellow Yale alumnus, William F. Buckley, had been recruited by the CIA in the 1950s.

Galbraith held prominent positions on the boards of LVMH, (Louis Vuitton Moet Hennessy), and Morgan Stanley, and even served as Ambassador to France. During his tenure in these roles, he covertly worked for the CIA as a NOC. His wife, Bootsy, was also involved in the intelligence community. Obviously covert operatives do not openly reveal their affiliations and this duplicity is common.

This was unknown to Lawrence Rockefeller, then in his 80s. He was a philosopher and professional philanthropist. He had intentions to donate his wealth for philanthropic causes but was unknowingly betrayed rather strongly by the Galbraiths and others within his circle.

These diversions led his funding away from his intended philanthropic efforts to what were actually psychological operations (Psyops) orchestrated by the agency. Laurence then became involved with Dr. John Mack, a Harvard psychiatrist, among others, who were unknowingly part of the CIA Psyop. The gravity of these disclosures and their implications are important for understanding covert operations.

A briefing document Dr. Greer had prepared and provided to the President and the CIA Director, referred to in their internal communications as the Best Available Evidence, or BAE-1, was a top priority item within their archives.

The document was appropriated by Bootsy Galbraith and others from her circle. Sandy (Sandra) Wright, who had connections with key figures including Butros Butros-Gali, the UN Secretary General, and George Lamb, a long-time confidant of Laurence Rockefeller from Greenwich, Connecticut, were pushed out of the picture.

Unbeknownst to Mr. Rockefeller, he was betrayed by those within his trusted social circle. As the situation gained prominence, these malevolent actors subverted Mr. Rockefeller's philanthropic intentions, demonstrating the challenges faced by philanthropists attempting to advance disclosure, whose efforts are often compromised by counterintelligence operatives.

Eventually, Ms. Galbraith took control of the BAE. She employed ufologists to revise it, allowing her to assert ownership by applying a copyright, and engaged a powerful New York City law firm to prevent Dr. Greer from using his own work.

This astonishing betrayal is a recurring theme. Dr. Greer was astounded to find his intellectual property claimed by others despite his intent to use it as open-source material, prioritizing truth over money, power, or any other gain. Unfortunately, this commitment to truth rarely offers practical rewards, a lesson Dr. Greer learned the hard way during the early 1990s.

By 1995, Dr. Greer had organized the gathering at Asilomar, funded and arranged by Laurence Rockefeller. However, as noted in a previous module, this event was compromised by individuals who infiltrated the initiative and misappropriated all the intellectual property, effectively burying it. This experience served as an early induction into the harsh realities of pursuing the Disclosure Project.

A report commissioned by the Department of Defense, ironically through the Coast Guard, was conducted by the Arlington Institute, a military national security think tank located near the Pentagon. John Peterson, the head of the institute, who previously had R. James Woolsey on his board, oversaw this project.

The result of the investigation was a publication titled "The Road to 2012," created in the early 1990s. The report identified the UFO issue as a "wild card" in national security.

This label was attributed to the activities of Dr. Greer's CE5 group in Florida, which had successfully made contact with extraterrestrial entities, resulting in the appearance of four unidentified objects. Recognizing the reality of these events, the report highlighted the potential of a civilian group to make contact with these civilizations, which could bypass traditional national security measures. This scenario represents a form of ultimate disclosure, where individuals directly engage with extraterrestrial beings independently of governmental oversight.

However, there is significant risk involved: when extraterrestrial objects materialize in three dimensions, they could be targeted and neutralized by scalar weapons.

This letter details that Operation Starlight was perceived as a significant threat to the existing power structures and influential figures around the world would take extensive measures to obstruct his initiatives.

Dr. Greer received a letter via FedEx on December 3, indicating a serious tone about the potential repercussions of his actions. This correspondence preceded a critical meeting scheduled for December 13, 1993, which had already been the subject of prior discussions and tentative plans.

During the meeting, it seemed that those present, including the then-CIA Director Woolsey, may not have fully recalled the contents of the letter. Subsequently, Woolsey's departure from his role led to misleading public statements about the meeting's intent, asserting that Dr. Greer had misrepresented the events.

However, the letter explicitly stated that the meeting's purpose was tied to inquiries from the president and the CIA director, who felt inadequately informed about certain issues.

This is the typical trajectory of individuals in high-stakes covert operations. Many start with integrity but become compromised and corrupted by the system.

In this case, there was no ambiguity about the meeting's occurrence, its purpose, or the discussions that took place. Dr. Greer did not abandon his responsibilities as an emergency doctor nor did he travel merely for a casual dinner; the meeting had significant motives, involving discussions with key figures like John Peterson and the CIA director.

This multi-hour briefing held with important officials was later denied and covered up by those involved.

During the Clinton administration, Dr. Greer tried to secure a series of executive orders aimed at releasing classified documents and protecting witnesses; initiatives similar to those being attempted currently, 30-years later.

The June 1995 Asilomar gathering in California included prominent individuals such as astronaut Edgar Mitchell and others with backgrounds in the KGB, CIA, and direct involvement with historical events like the Roswell crash. Although the recordings from the Asilomar gathering were thought to have been lost, they were preserved and are stored in the DPIA archive.

The Asilomar meeting culminated in a letter dated June 4, 1995, addressed to the president, signed by several attendees including Bootsy Galbraith, Sandy Wright, George Lamb, Astronaut Edgar Mitchell, Dr. Brian O'Leary, and Dr. Greer himself. The letter emphasized the gathering's outcomes and urged the president to release individuals from their national security obligations. By expressing his long-held belief that certain projects were being run unconstitutionally and illegally, Dr. Greer assessed that the president should declare this via an executive order.

This was a "Hail Mary" - a last attempt before shifting focus towards Congress and then to the public through the open disclosure project event in 2001.

In 1996, a year after these concerted efforts, Dr. Greer analyzed and documented why the national security oaths and nondisclosure agreements (NDAs) related to UFO information were essentially invalid. This document marked his initial attempt to compile and present evidence supporting this claim, which expanded over several pages.

Dr. Greer had convinced his team and aimed to demonstrate to the President that the secrecy surrounding UFO projects was not only unwarranted but illegal. This lack of transparency extended to high-ranking military officials, and influential members of the Senate, all of whom were denied access to pertinent information.

An official release from their NDAs for anyone involved with the UFO subject did not materialize. It was an effort to provoke decisive action from the executive branch. Former President George H.W. Bush had reportedly exerted direct pressure on President Clinton, leading to a retreat from any overt official actions. Instead, covert operations such as the red, blue, and black team activities at Nellis and other locations were carried out.

A significant letter from 1996 addressed to the President involved key committee members and was part of an expanded effort to engage more contacts, including Daniel Goldin, the director of NASA.

Not all key figures were fully informed about the details of the UFO disclosure efforts, including the chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee and others. By then, a new Director of Central Intelligence had been appointed, and notable figures such as Secretary of Defense William Perry, National Security Advisor Tony Lake, Vice President Al Gore, Secretary of State Warren Christopher, and General Shalikashvili, who was Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, were being solicited to support the disclosure effort.

This phase was an intelligence assessment, aimed at determining the validity of the national security oaths that were believed to be unlawfully binding on these officials. This assessment was part of a broader due diligence process before launching a public, non-governmental disclosure initiative.

The goal was to ensure that every necessary procedural step was taken and that all individuals in the constitutional chain of command were informed and given the opportunity to act before proceeding with public disclosure.

This period of activity also involved preparing and sending key documentation, such as the "Road to 2012" report from John Peterson's Arlington Institute and other briefing materials to important decision makers.

Unfortunately, some of these documents were later misappropriated and copyrighted without Dr. Greer's consent.

During these efforts, Dr. Greer was in constant communication with a Department of Defense Navy intelligence officer on his team, who is unnamed to maintain confidentiality. This officer was not only kept informed about the outcomes of significant meetings but was also instrumental in arranging further meetings with senior Defense Department officials.

One crucial document was sent to the head of intelligence for the Joint Chiefs of Staff, known as J2. At that time, this position was held by Admiral Cramer. In the archives is a letter countering any claims that Dr. Greer had not had significant meetings with a division at Wright-Patterson AFB that dealt with UFOs.

The detailed discussions with a Colonel at the Foreign Aerospace Science and Technology Center in Wright-Patterson included officials from J2 and Wright-Patterson personnel, was for deconfliction. This document not only outlined the reasons for the meeting but also confirmed its existence.

In April 1997, another J2, Admiral Tom Wilson, agreed to a formal stand-up briefing at the Pentagon.

The existence of this paper trail supports the occurrence of these meetings, countering claims by skeptics, counterintelligence operatives, and others who attempted to discredit the Disclosure Project by denying these activities.

Dr. Greer was then invited by Congressman Cox to come to his home district in Orange County to brief him on these matters. The briefing was organized by a prominent member of the Orange County community who clarified beforehand that Congressman Cox, despite his influential role on the House Science and Technology Committee, was unfamiliar with the topic at hand.

Historically, some members of this committee, like Congressman Brown of California in the 1960s, had been privy to classified information.

The briefing aimed to educate and possibly enlist Congressman Cox's support. A letter sent in conjunction with this meeting noted the lack of briefing for the CIA director and referenced a conversation with Dick D'Amato, Chief Counsel for the Senate Appropriations Committee. D'Amato described the covert programs as the "varsity team" of secrecy.

These efforts were part of Dr. Greer's broader strategy to inform key figures about constitutional issues arising from the secrecy surrounding advanced technology within covert programs.

The significance of these technologies, potentially the most crucial scientific advancements of the last century, underscored the importance of informing the members of the Science and Technology Committee. Access to such classified information was typically restricted to individuals who had demonstrated their ability to maintain secrecy. This practice often occurred at the expense of broader governmental transparency and public trust.

Congressman Cox, who later became the head of the SEC under President George W. Bush, verified that he had never been briefed on the subject despite his years on relevant congressional committees. At the end of their meeting, he inquired about the locations of the facilities and corporations involved.

This prompted the creation of the “Cox Memo”, which initially listed the facilities and corporations involved and was later expanded significantly. The document now includes details on 151 sites, with more information continually being added.

[\[Cox memo link\]](#)

This list could grow to several hundred entries over the next year as new information surfaces each month.

Sandy Wright, a socialite very attuned to these issues at the time, was instrumental in arranging a meeting between Dr. Greer and then-UN Secretary General Boutros Boutros-Ghali and his wife, Lea. The Ghali's who were Egyptian, were supportive of the subject and keen to discuss these matters further.

The involvement of Ms. Galbraith, who was cc'd on the correspondence due to her being in the same circle of friends, led to a subsequent meeting in New York. The gathering took place at the residence of novelist Judith Green. Although the UN Secretary General was unable to attend, his wife was present among the other notable attendees.

During this salon, Dr. Greer engaged in significant conversations that were not documented due to their private nature. However, after some have passed on, details emerged, like the funding of the Egyptian government to explore beneath the Sphinx, believed by some to house chambers containing extraterrestrial artifacts. This expedition was part of efforts dating back to 1994 or earlier, involving the use of early fiber optic technology to explore these chambers. Compared to the great pyramids of Giza, the Sphinx is considerably older. Dating from the Antediluvian period, it predates many known historical events, such as massive floods, as evidenced by watermarks on its structure.

The head of the expedition, the then-head of antiquities in Egypt, was covertly affiliated with the CIA, a fact that only became apparent later. What they found, they absconded with and handed it over to these compartmented covert programs.

Lea Butros-Gali was certain significant artifacts that had once been housed within the chambers beneath the Sphinx, were no longer there.

Following this salon, she organized a distinguished gathering at the United Nations where Dr. Greer was invited to present information on extraterrestrials, UFOs, and the potential for peace in space to a select group of diplomats and UN leadership. The goal was to garner support for international disclosure efforts.

The effort was ultimately unsuccessful, and the Secretary General subsequently vacated his position at the UN.

There are deep familial connections that often underpin the covert organizations responsible for maintaining secrecy around certain intelligence activities.

From Virginia, Senator John Warner was notably a member of the Majority Joint Intelligence Committee (MAJIC), served as Secretary of the Navy, and later ascended to a senior role as a U.S. Senator, actively involved in the Armed Services and Intelligence committees.

These connections extended into his personal life. Senator Warner was initially married to the daughter of Paul Mellon, a key figure in the founding of the CIA alongside Alan Dulles, and linked to earlier discussions about a Nazi disc. After his divorce, he married actress Elizabeth Taylor; another example of his high-profile connections.

Warner was also involved with a friend of Dr. Greer's, Sandy Wright. Intrigued by these connections and what they might imply about Warner's knowledge of covert operations, he asked Wright to subtly inquire about Warner's involvement during one of their outings.

The response Warner provided is indicative of his training in counterintelligence, reflecting techniques taught at a facility colloquially known as "The Farm." This site is well-known within covert circles as a place where operatives are trained to effectively deceive, including passing lie detector tests.

One specific counterintelligence technique is used to divert conversations away from sensitive topics. This method involves listening to a question they prefer not to address, then seamlessly continuing the conversation by picking up from the last word of their previous statement, effectively ignoring the question.

Senator Warner displayed this technique during a discussion when he simply bypassed a sensitive question posed by Sandy Wright, returning to the previous topic as if the interruption had never occurred.

This method of conversation control is a result of intensive training designed to allow operatives to manage discussions and maintain secrets effectively. This is not merely an incidental skill but part of a comprehensive training program.

In ongoing correspondence concerning how to proceed with discussions involving the UN Secretary General, one particular letter to Lea Boutros-Ghali, Dr. Greer detailed the involvement of Lawrence Rockefeller, who was copied on this correspondence. Certain names mentioned in the letter were redacted for privacy.

Senator Barry Goldwater, the senior senator from Arizona who ran for president in 1964 following the assassination of President Kennedy, and lost by a landslide to Lyndon Johnson, was known for his openness about such meetings, which others have sometimes claimed never happened. Documentation from January 1984 following a meeting serves as evidence to the contrary.

This has happened over and over in Dr. Greer's personal experiences over the past thirty years. Dr. Greer visited Senator Goldwater in Scottsdale, Arizona, accompanied by his liaison. Senator Goldwater had retired, and his Senate seat had been taken by Senator John McCain. The archive contains a substantial section dedicated to Senator Goldwater, featuring multiple letters and correspondence.

During their meeting, Dr. Greer and Senator Goldwater, a general in the Air Force Reserves, discussed General Curtis LeMay. LeMay, known for his extreme military strategies, was recommending to the senator that when Goldwater became president he should use thermonuclear weapons to end the Vietnam War.

This association with LeMay influenced public perception of Goldwater during his presidential campaign, particularly due to Lyndon Johnson's campaign ads in 1964 that leveraged the fear of nuclear war, significantly impacting Goldwater's public image and electoral prospects.

Senator Goldwater expressed his certainty about the existence of unexplained phenomena, despite never being officially briefed on the matter during his tenure as head of the Republican Party, a presidential nominee, and a senior member of both the Senate Intelligence and Armed Services Committees.

As a World War II veteran and a general in the Air Force Reserves, Goldwater had heard firsthand accounts from pilots, who he affectionately referred to as "flyboys," about their extraordinary encounters. These stories were typically informal and not part of any official briefing.

Goldwater's high-ranking status made him curious about the classified aspects of these encounters. He was particularly interested in accessing a secure area known as the "blue room" at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base. This area supposedly housed extraterrestrial materials and remains from incidents dating back to the 1940s and 1950s.

When Senator Goldwater asked General LeMay, who was the Chief of Staff of the Air Force at the time, for access to this sensitive area, LeMay's response was emphatically negative. It was highly restricted, even to a senior senator and potential presidential candidate. LeMay himself no longer had access and threatened severe repercussions if Goldwater pressed the issue again. It effectively silenced Goldwater on the matter.

Towards the end of one meeting, Senator Goldwater, said to Dr. Greer, "It was a goddamn mistake then, and it's a goddamn mistake now that this was ever handled by the military in a covert way."

In 1994, Goldwater again asked how he could help. Dr. Greer provided a briefing document, seeking Goldwater's assistance in reaching out to members of a covert committee involved with these issues. Despite listing several prominent figures involved in the operations, including Dick Cheney, Henry Kissinger, and George H.W. Bush, Goldwater did not have personal connections with most of them. He did, however, with Admiral Bobby Ray Inman. Goldwater recognized him as a long-time friend.

This connection was particularly significant because Inman was a key figure within the Majority Joint Intelligence Committee (MAJIC), holding a high position, #2, in the hierarchy of those privy to classified information regarding extraterrestrial matters.

Senator Goldwater agreed to contact Admiral Inman so Dr. Greer could discuss his needs directly with the Admiral. Admiral Inman had served as the Director of the National Security Agency and Deputy Director of the CIA and was deeply knowledgeable about classified operations, though he publicly denied such involvement.

After receiving a letter from her father, Joanne Goldwater contacted Dr. Greer to convey that her father could no longer facilitate such communications. She indicated that Admiral Inman had issued a stern warning to Senator Goldwater, implying threats to his entire family's safety.

Senator Goldwater realized that the risks associated with pursuing these matters were even greater than he had been led to believe by General Curtis LeMay. As a result, the efforts known as the Goldwater Initiative were discontinued.

Senator Goldwater, who has since passed away, provided significant insights during the meeting that underscored his unique position as an inverse witness - the term Dr. Greer uses to describe individuals who, despite their high-ranking statuses and clearances, are kept out of the loop on certain classified projects.

Goldwater, a former presidential nominee, head of the Republican Party, and founder of the conservative pro-military movement, served as a general in the Air Force Reserves and chaired key Senate committees. Despite these credentials, he was not privy to certain information and faced threats when he inquired about sensitive matters, initially from General Curtis LeMay and later from Admiral Bobby Inman following the meeting at his home with Dr. Greer described above.

These incidents are critical data points that could help a special law enforcement investigator prove that some projects operate outside legal bounds and are insubordinate to both the chain of command and the U.S. Constitution.

And there are hundreds of these examples.

Correspondence with Lord Hill-Norton, also deceased, expresses interest in meeting to discuss these issues. This led to a subsequent meeting in England, which furthered their dialogue until Lord Hill Norton's death.

Despite his high-ranking positions as head of the Ministry of Defence (MOD), MI5, MI6, and the Military Committee for NATO, and his status as a five-star admiral, he was also an inverse witness, having never been briefed on certain classified matters. This lack of access serves as another crucial data point highlighting the widespread issues of secrecy and legality within these covert programs, not just within the United States but globally.

Lord Hill-Norton was particularly distressed by his exclusion from critical knowledge, which echoes the frustration felt by many high-ranking officials.

These documents and correspondences are archived and accessible as undeniable proof of these meetings and the substantial discussions that took place, countering the misinformation spread by those who seek to undermine the credibility of important disclosures.

Ingo Swann was recognized as the premier remote viewer for the CIA and was known for his precision in that role. Swann authored a book titled Penetration which, despite its provocative title, delves into the capability to consciously access distant locations through remote viewing, a practice that has spanned many decades.

Swann, along with Dr. Russell Targ - a laser physicist at Lockheed who was drawn into the same operation - participated in these programs. Dr. Targ has since become one of the witnesses interviewed for the documentary Close Encounters of the Fifth Kind.

In 1995, Swann expressed admiration for Dr. Greer's work, as he was the only one using the science of consciousness for constructive purposes. Swann was deeply troubled by how his unique capabilities had been exploited by covert interests.

As Swann aged, he expressed significant regret for the paths he had chosen in his youth, driven by the allure of importance and the flattery and inducements offered to him. The covert operations Swann and Russell Targ were involved in were only part of a larger framework, one that Swann had not been fully informed about.

These more advanced programs involved the Technology Assisted Consciousness and Consciousness Assisted Technology Systems (TAC/CAT); realms that Swann and his contemporaries like Targ, Ed Dames and Hal Putoff had never been privy to.

Dr. Greer knew about these advanced systems through contacts that operated these technologies, understanding where and how they functioned. This knowledge spanned various high-tech and low-tech methods of interfacing consciousness with technology, including psychotronics, radionics, and scalar remote influencing - techniques that could enable a person to remotely perceive distant locations, or even the far side of celestial bodies.

Swann had demonstrated remarkable accuracy in this during his remote viewing sessions, seeing celestial bodies and moons that had not been detected by telescopes.

These capabilities have evolved into more routine and reproducible interactions between technology and consciousness, referred to as P3 operations, involving psychic telepathy and telekinesis. Emerging technologies like Elon Musk's Neuralink are similar, but on a more sophisticated level. Thoughts directly interact with technology beyond conventional electromagnetic means, using the quanta of thought within the consciousness field.

These advanced communications systems bridged the gap between Swann's previous understanding and the current state of technology interfacing with consciousness, which Swann has never been read into.

The reason authorities allowed discussions on remote viewing to progress rather than silencing those involved was to focus public attention on what seemed like a pop culture phenomenon. This strategy effectively distracted from more classified developments in TAC/CAT systems which originated in the 50s, 60s, and 70s.

These were far more secretive than the conventional remote viewing programs managed by the CIA and the Monroe Institute with Robert Monroe. Thus, the well-publicized CIA remote viewing program served merely as a storefront, diverting attention from where the significant advancements were occurring.

Ingo Swann in his youth, had not grasped the full implications of his involvement in these covert programs and passed away regretting his participation, recognizing it as nonsensical and lamenting his role.

Transitioning to royal interests, Dr. Greer had flown to the UK on several occasions to deliver briefing materials for Prince Charles. Both Prince Charles and Prince Philip had a pronounced interest in such matters, spurred by an incident reported by Lord Mountbatten, where an unidentified craft landed on his estate.

This incident had heightened the Princes' curiosity, leading them to subscribe to the Flying Salsa Review, a publication started by a former British intelligence officer named Gordon Creighton. He is one of the Disclosure Project witnesses.

During this interview, Creighton confirmed that Prince Philip and Prince Charles had been dedicated subscribers to the Flying Salsa Review for many years.

In 1992, a conference in Atlanta which included the head of army intelligence and representatives from the CIA and NSA as well as Special Forces General Stubblebine, also saw the participation of a friend of Prince Charles from his close circle: Lady Cawdor of Cawdor Castle in Scotland, associated by name with Shakespeare's Macbeth.

Lady Cawdor explained her connection to Prince Charles and inquired if Dr. Greer could share his work with the Prince. Of course, Dr. Greer agreed and, after providing materials to Lady Cawdor, he prepared additional documents for Prince Charles himself.

Actor James Cromwell, known for his roles in films like L.A. Confidential and Babe, participated in a related film, Star Trek: First Contact. Cromwell had been cast to play the role of Dr. Greer in a sequence that showed a human making first contact with extraterrestrial intelligence in the modern era.

Dr. Greer invited Cromwell to a CE5 contact expedition outside Palm Springs, where they witnessed a craft descending and moving audibly overhead. This experience showed Cromwell and others the extraterrestrial's responsiveness under the right conditions.

Cromwell attended the film's grand premiere at Royal Albert Hall in London, where Prince Charles was also present. During the event, Cromwell discreetly carried a comprehensive briefing document, which he intended to present to Prince Charles, though protocol dictated that such documents should be handed to an assistant rather than directly to a dignitary.

This is the acknowledgment received for the briefing document.

Prince Charles, now King Charles III, is known for his significant interest in these issues. Information regarding Queen Elizabeth II and her awareness of such matters remained uncertain.

Kofi Annan, who had served as the UN Secretary-General, was very open to Dr. Greer and his work. Initially, the National Press Club Event of May 9th, 2001, was planned for the Great Hall and the General Assembly of the United Nations.

In the lead-up, Dr. Greer had multiple discussions with Kofi Annan's right-hand person, the most senior diplomat from South Korea. The suggestion to hold a dinner was initially floated but later expanded into a more ambitious plan for a public disclosure event at the UN. And Kofi Annan had endorsed this plan.

The event was cancelled after counterintelligence operatives intervened and directly threatened to defund and effectively dissolve the United Nations if the meeting went ahead as planned.

Even global institutions like the United Nations are not immune to pressure and manipulation by powerful covert entities. Consequently, the event was relocated and held at the National Press Club instead, a decision made in the shadow of these stark revelations.

In 2009, President Sarkozy of the French Republic expressed a keen interest in Dr. Greer's work and authorized his Ministry of Defense to delve into this area and gather relevant information. This directive was part of a broader engagement with phenomena that had previously been explored in the French COMETA Report.

This comprehensive report, which involved contributors like Chapelle and GEIPAN (the French equivalent of NASA), is archived along with other significant cases.

Dr. Greer did not have a direct meeting with President Sarkozy, but he closely collaborated with the top officials of the French Ministry of Defense, including Admiral Pierre Moran. Admiral Moran, an accomplished individual with a PhD in physics and recipient of the prestigious Ampere Prize, was charged with overseeing this initiative.

The engagement went beyond mere information gathering. At the behest of President Sarkozy, the French Ministry of Defense embarked on a project to facilitate peaceful interstellar contact, aligning with the principles of the CE5 contact protocols.

Dr. Greer was invited to France to lead this training, furthering the efforts to establish diplomatic and peaceful contacts with extraterrestrial entities under the auspices of the French government.

In the archives is a section dealing with this "French connection" which includes some of the most pivotal documents pertaining to engagements with extraterrestrial contact initiatives. Among these, the most significant is a letter from the French Ministry of Defense (MOD).

This letter outlines a commitment to engage in a long-term project aimed at establishing peaceful contact between humans and extraterrestrial civilizations, to be approached both scientifically and diplomatically.

This correspondence is noteworthy for its historical and diplomatic value, reflecting the French tradition of diplomacy where French was once the lingua franca.

This initiative was particularly challenging due to external pressures. During the setup of a contact expedition, all communications, including emails and faxes, were intercepted. At one point, the French ambassador to the United States received a direct threat from someone within the U.S. intelligence community, warning against proceeding with the plans on or near U.S. soil.

Dr. Greer advised the ambassador to assert the sovereignty of the French Republic and proceed with the planned activities on French soil. Undeterred by the threats, the French team proceeded with the planned CE5 contact event, which allowed public participation.

Sixty people attended this event, a large number for such engagements at that time. The venue for this event was provided by the Aubin family, noted in historical records as one of the founding families of the French Republic and linked to the revolutionary act of the beheading of Marie Antoinette.

Their ancestral property in Brittany, once sprawling over 22,000 acres but reduced to 2,200 due to financial strains, hosted the event. The manor house and the surrounding fields served as the backdrop for this significant encounter.

Embedded within the group was Admiral Moran alongside his aides, casually dressed in plaid shirts to blend in with the rest of the participants so no one knew these were high-ranking officials from the French Ministry of Defense, authorized by the President of France to partake in this groundbreaking expedition. Security was tight around the estate, with a perimeter established and radar in place to monitor any unusual activity.

The week turned out to be extraordinary, marked by several phenomenal extraterrestrial contact events. Participants witnessed what appeared to be a trans-dimensional object in the field, described as a moving rainbow, an image captured in a fleeting photograph.

Radar tracked fast-moving objects overhead, traveling at speeds of approximately 200,000 kilometers per hour, making sharp maneuvers that were just visible with the aid of night vision scopes.

The official cover for this remarkable gathering was a CE5 training event.

This approach to engaging with extraterrestrial phenomena was methodical, aiming to shift the global stance from a militaristic to a diplomatic and peaceful engagement. Unfortunately, the change in political climate with President Sarkozy's election loss and the subsequent deterioration of Admiral Moran's health due to cancer meant that the promising initiative they started did not reach its full potential.

It's been 15 years since those efforts.

On March 28, 1994, Dr. Greer received communication from the Palace in Liechtenstein, a notable financial hub and a sovereign city-state.

The banking sector in Liechtenstein, historically noted for its significant financial support to the Third Reich, remains a crucial hub for covert and controversial financial activities.

Dr. Greer was introduced to Hans-Adam II, Prince of Liechtenstein through a mutual acquaintance. The prince was deeply involved in efforts to counter corruption associated with Laurence Rockefeller and was also engaged in theoretical plans for the 'Star Wars' interplanetary war scenario.

The prince sent Dr. Greer a cryptic letter, acknowledging receipt of an earlier correspondence and expressing a cautious stance towards the proposed policy changes under the Clinton administration concerning these sensitive subjects. He conveyed his support for the initiatives but remained skeptical about their success. He suggested a meeting in Europe rather than the United States, citing the sensitive nature of the discussions.

Following this exchange, Dr. Greer and the Prince attempted to coordinate a meeting. Due to Dr. Greer's commitments as an emergency doctor and chair of emergency medicine, he could not travel to Europe as easily as he would have liked.

However, the opportunity for a meeting eventually presented itself when the Crown prince planned a visit to the United States to meet with Laurence Rockefeller that July.

Before their face-to-face meeting, Dr. Greer and the prince had a profound phone discussion about the disclosure of extraterrestrial intelligence. The prince revealed his reservations, suggesting that extraterrestrial beings themselves would not permit full disclosure. They needed to talk about this in person.

In July of 1994, their schedules finally aligned. The prince elaborated on his concerns, explaining that his perspective was shaped by a lack of access to the most secretive compartmented projects that dealt with fabricated alien abductions and other deceptive activities. To him, much of what was purported as genuine extraterrestrial contact was misleading, akin to fool's gold.

During the presidency of George H. W. Bush, the prince was part of a working group that included President Bush, Pérez de Cuéllar, the then Secretary General of the UN, and other high-level officials. The goal was to publicly disclose information about extraterrestrials; most likely by staging a false flag operation and alleging an alien attack.

The plans for disclosure were ultimately thwarted by internal divisions within the Majority Joint Intelligence Committee (MAJIC), a group of 200-300 key members, all highly fractured.

Pérez de Cuéllar experienced a dramatic late-night incident, directly conveyed to Dr. Greer by the Prince: an orchestrated event disguised as an alien abduction.

The alleged abduction was leaked to the UFO subculture by Bud Hopkins, who described it as the abduction of a high-level international figure, without naming anyone. The orchestration involved sophisticated manipulation and a notable figure from the Roswell incident - a red-headed sergeant who had notoriously threatened witnesses. This sergeant's son was strategically placed in the security detail for de Cuéllar to facilitate the deception.

The staged abduction occurred as they were leaving a late-night meeting in Manhattan around 3 a.m. The Secretary General was forcibly removed from his limousine and placed onto what was purported to be an alien spacecraft, which in reality was one of the human-made Alien Reproduction Vehicles (ARVs).

During this staged event, the counterfeit extraterrestrials threatened that if the planned disclosure proceeded, every world leader involved, including the President of the United States, would be similarly abducted.

This threat was conveyed to the Bush White House and reportedly caused a significant uproar. The resulting fear and uncertainty led to the immediate cessation of all efforts related to the disclosure initiative.

There were a few notable events involving President George H. W. Bush where he reportedly encountered UFOs while out on his cigarette speedboat. These UFOs appeared menacing, leading to his security detail taking swift action to ensure his safety.

These were not extraterrestrial vehicles; they were our own highly classified ARVs.

Despite his high-ranking position, President Bush was considered relatively moderate within these circles, especially compared to figures like Admiral Bobby Ray Inman known for his hardline stance. This backdrop of deception and intrigue is why Prince Hans-Adam of Liechtenstein was so pessimistic in his correspondence.

He was led to believe that extraterrestrial beings themselves would prevent any disclosure, not realizing that the events he referenced were part of an elaborate ruse orchestrated by human agencies - what the intelligence community refers to as "stagecraft."

Prince Hans-Adam of Liechtenstein was deeply involved with the abduction community, significantly funding figures like Bud Hopkins, John Mack, and David Jacobs, who were prominent within that field.

Curious about the Prince's motivations, Dr. Greer learned of his financial support to an extreme faction within the Vatican known as Opus Dei, characterized by rigorous, even severe, spiritual disciplines including self-flagellation.

The prince hosted masses in his castle's chapel, attended by the Pope. He shared a radical eschatological belief that Armageddon, envisioned as an interplanetary war, was a necessary apocalypse to precipitate the second coming of Christ. According to his belief, the Earth must face near-total destruction for Christ to return and for the faithful to ascend in the rapture.

This perspective highlights how deeply held beliefs can influence actions and decisions, often overriding factual evidence. In this case, Prince Hans-Adam's convictions about eschatology and extraterrestrial engagement led him to support the dissemination of abduction narratives, under the impression that these efforts were part of a larger, divine plan.

The prince had been cleverly misled, not realizing that these events were intricately staged by covert operations using advanced technologies. These technologies included man-made craft and beings, as well as sophisticated electronics capable of astral extraction - where an individual's consciousness is drawn out, similar to out-of-body experiences. Physical effects on the body, such as stigmata, are manipulated to appear as signs of alien interactions.

Despite the Prince's extensive global travels to locations of UFO sightings, the phenomena appeared to avoid the prince. Dr. Greer affirmed that the prince's perspective could indeed be affecting his experiences with UFOs. The prince was unknowingly promoting disinformation about alien threats, portraying extraterrestrial contact as hostile.

This deception extends back to the earliest publicized abduction cases, such as those of Betty and Barney Hill, with few aware of the staged nature of these events.

This is the deepest, darkest secret within the archive. Pulling back the curtain and revealing the extent of deception means they cannot control the future of the world by creating a military junta, a military totalitarian regime, which is the objective.

While staying at a hotel in Manhattan when meeting with the Prince of Lichtenstein, Dr. Greer was targeted by a directional energy beam similar to those reported in incidents like the Havana Syndrome, and part of the abduction technology aimed at manipulating his perceptions.

This technology attempted to forcibly extract Dr. Greer from his physical body - an experience that felt profoundly malevolent and was intended to terrorize him into believing the narratives he was meant to discredit. Drawing on his background as a meditation teacher, Dr. Greer employed deep meditative techniques to counteract these effects. He invoked the power of cosmic consciousness, achieving a state of Samadhi, beyond the reach of his assailants' technology.

This metaphysical defense mechanism, where Dr. Greer likened himself to a single drop merging with the ocean, effectively shielded him from being "pulled out" of his body. They can pull a drop but not the entire ocean.

Despite repeated attacks with the directional energy weapon, which lasted for about an hour, his attackers eventually ceased their efforts. Dr. Greer then used his abilities to remote view, tracing back to the operators controlling the technology and saw how it was being done.

By July of 1994, Dr. Greer had personally penetrated and observed the mechanisms behind covert operations.

Prince Albert of Monaco, the son of Grace Kelly, was interested beyond mere curiosity; he was deeply invested in environmental protection and the potential of advanced energy systems to benefit the biosphere.

To facilitate a briefing with Prince Albert without attracting undue attention, a cover was devised around a significant public event hosted by Prince Albert in Washington DC. Dr. Greer was invited to the opening of Monaco's new embassy, which provided the perfect pretext for private discussions.

During these events, Dr. Greer had the opportunity to meet with Prince Albert and the head of the Prince Albert II Environmental Foundation. These meetings, held under the guise of social and environmental functions, allowed them to discuss the potential of new technologies to address environmental challenges without raising suspicions about the true depth of their conversations concerning extraterrestrial technologies.

During a discreet meeting set up in a library converted into a briefing room at the embassy, Dr. Greer presented briefing materials and discussed the potential for funding research and development of zero-point energy technologies, which Prince Albert showed a keen interest in supporting.

However, the endeavor faced significant obstacles upon the prince's return to Monaco.

Intelligence officials, not native to Monaco but from the surrounding regions, confronted Prince Albert and presented him with a dossier containing potentially scandalous personal information.

A Jamaican diplomat who had served as an ambassador to the UN and had become acquainted with Prince Albert, relayed the details of this encounter. The intelligence officials explicitly threatened to publicize the damaging information if Prince Albert continued to pursue the funding of alternative energy technologies. Faced with the potential public scandal and its repercussions, Prince Albert was compelled to withdraw his support for the project.

THIS IS HOW THEY OPERATE. The necessity for integrity, intelligence, and courage to navigate and withstand such coercive tactics are the harsh realities anyone looking to challenge the status quo might face.

The tactics used by the so-called deep state to suppress dissent are ruthlessly aggressive. These operatives are nothing more than fascists and thugs, prepared to use any means necessary to neutralize influential individuals within government or corporate sectors - essentially anyone capable of instigating significant changes.

There are many, many witnesses to this.

A 2015 presentation Dr. Greer gave in Washington, D.C. about the deep national security state - a term he used before it became widely popularized in recent political discourse - is fully documented and available for public review.

To further connect the dots, Dr. Greer was invited into a SCIF by key individuals working with members of the Senate Intelligence Committee and Armed Services Committee.

They discussed the key figures involved in covert operations, naming those who should be subpoenaed and investigated. Among those discussed was Admiral Bobby Ray Inman, who after serving as director of the National Security Agency, joined the board of Science Applications International Corporation (SAIC).

SAIC, headquartered in La Jolla, California, not only engages in conventional business but also operates a division involved in illegal secret government programs.

In this high-security environment, where no electronic devices are allowed and all discussions are contained within shielded spaces to prevent electronic eavesdropping, Dr. Greer provided sensitive information which was then secured in the facility's safe.

Following the meeting, the senior most person had two unmarked helicopters hovering over his home in Virginia, intimidating him and his family.

The next day, Admiral Inman, who had not made public statements on the issue in a very long time, vehemently denied any knowledge or involvement in covert programs during a public radio interview. This response and subsequent intimidation tactics were no mere coincidences. They are proof of the deep penetration and influence of these covert operations.

There are no secure facilities - not in the military, CIA, Senate, or even the Presidential Emergency Operations Center (PEOC) - that are immune to the subspace or trans dimensional technologies capable of bypassing conventional security measures, including electromagnetic shielding.

Facilities designed to prevent electronic eavesdropping are susceptible to advanced technologies capable of penetrating any space-time without an electromagnetic field. Any SCIF, any room, everything single thing being said can be tracked in real-time. Operation Security protocols (OPSEC) are futile against these capabilities.

Admiral Inman came out to deny his involvement immediately, as if he had heard the conversation. Because he had.

In 1993, when Dr. Greer was asked to brief CIA Director Woolsey, the sensitivity of the information was so acute that the intermediary, John Peterson, insisted on using code and conducting conversations in random phone booths to mitigate the risk of interception.

By 1993 Dr. Greer had already been made aware of exotic communication and surveillance technologies capable of penetrating any operational security measures and told Peterson as much. This revelation was further validated when an NOC confirmed these capabilities due to his unique clearance level, a rarity even within secretive circles.

Ben Rich, the head of Lockheed's Skunk Works, famously stated that there are no private conversations anywhere on Earth, regardless of the security measures. High-security environments like the Presidential Emergency Operations Center, the Situation Room, and various other SCIFs across governmental bodies like the Senate, CIA, and NASA are all compromised.

As stated at the beginning of this briefing: Transparency is essential. Supposed secrets are not only known to adversaries, but they restrict vital information from those who genuinely need it. The organization deploying these technologies has them fully penetrated in real time regardless of their optics.

The nature of consciousness and its relationship with the physical body, which challenges the conventional neuroscientific and medical perspectives is that the physical body does not generate consciousness; rather, consciousness manifests the physical body.

This understanding is pivotal as it relates to technologies that can interact with consciousness at a subtle dimensional level, affecting the physical body by manipulating the 'body of light.'

This archive explores not only advanced topics like anti-gravity and free energy but also delves into the profound and "spooky" aspects of technologies that interface with consciousness. Demonstrating the reality of these phenomena paves the way for a deeper understanding of the interplay between consciousness and physical manifestations.
